The AI Moment for India's MSMEs

India's MSMEs have crossed the AI adoption threshold. The question is no longer whether AI is relevant, but whether businesses can convert widespread use into deeper capability, stronger growth and sustained advantage.

- Early value has validated the technology, not yet transformed the business. Time savings, cost reductions and better decisions show that AI works in defined tasks. Yet the concentration of use in back-office and internal operations indicates that most gains still improve the existing model rather than reshape it.
- A wide adoption base is masking a narrow capability core. Three in four MSMEs use AI in some form, but only 5% place it at the core of operations. This suggests that access has expanded faster than workflow redesign, system integration and organizational readiness.
- Efficiency is acting as the entry point; growth remains the unrealized multiplier. The survey shows a credible efficiency dividend, but customer-facing deployment and significant AI-enabled offerings remain limited. The larger prize will come when proven operating gains are redirected towards market reach, customer experience and differentiated products or services.
- The constraint is shifting from affordability to execution. Training is the strongest accelerator, yet reinvestment in people remains low. The gap implies that many firms recognize what AI could do but have not built the functional capability to identify higher-value use cases, validate outputs and scale what works.
- Governance is not keeping pace with decision dependence. AI outputs increasingly influence action, while guardrails remain uncommon. The risk is broader than privacy: fragmented inputs, weak links to verified systems and limited review can make confident AI outputs operationally unreliable.

D&B's RIFTS Framework diagnoses the distance to AI advantage

- D&B's RIFTS Framework translates this research into five connected gaps between current use and sustained value: Reliability, Integration, Future Value, Talent and Safeguards. Its analytical value lies in showing that these are not isolated weaknesses. Poor data reduces confidence; limited capability keeps deployment shallow; shallow deployment delays integration; weak integration restricts growth; and limited safeguards increase the risk of scaling unreliable decisions. RIFTS identifies both where value is leaking and why adoption alone will not close the gap.

D&B's LEAP Framework provides the pathway to close it

- D&B's LEAP Framework turns that diagnosis into a sequenced operating agenda: Lay the Data Foundations, Enable Every Function, Anchor AI in Your Systems and Pioneer Custom Journeys. LEAP is deliberately cumulative, not a menu of parallel actions. Trusted data improves output quality; capable functions convert outputs into decisions; system integration makes those decisions repeatable; and only then can AI credibly support differentiated customer experiences, products and revenue. The framework shifts the ambition from deploying more tools to building an enterprise capability that compounds.

The next phase of MSME AI will be defined not by how many businesses use a tool, but by how many build the data, capability and operating discipline to turn AI into a repeatable source of growth.

Introduction

The backbone is broad. The middle is missing.

India does not have an MSME problem of numbers. It has a problem of depth.

The scale of India's MSME sector is well established

India's Micro, Small and Medium enterprises (MSMEs) are most often described through three measures of national contribution: output, exports and employment. The sector accounts for 31.1% of India's GDP and 48.58% of its exports, and it employs 32.82 crore people, making it the second-largest source of employment after agriculture. These contributions are generated by 7.47 crore enterprises, which also account for 35.4% of manufacturing output. Taken together, the figures establish the sector's economic significance beyond dispute.

However, the sector also faces a significant constraint. The addressable credit gap is estimated at roughly INR 30 lakh crore — about 24% of assessed credit demand, and the shortfall is not evenly borne. It widens to 27% in services and to 35% for women-owned MSMEs.[1]

The structure beneath the aggregates: What the national picture hides

Examined more closely, the sector presents a distribution that is broad at its base and unusually narrow above it.

The enterprise pyramid is steeply weighted toward micro units, which dominate the registered base. Relatively few firms operate at a scale that allows them to absorb technology, specialized talent or process improvement in any systematic manner. Formalization remains partial: 35% of micro enterprises are still unregistered, citing limited awareness and apprehension regarding regulatory scrutiny rather than any objection to registration in principle. Access to institutional finance is similarly constrained, with only 14% of MSMEs able to obtain formal credit; the remainder continue to rely on informal, higher-cost sources.[2] Digital adoption shows measurable progress, with 53.8% of enterprises having adopted at least one digital tool, though 46.2% continue to operate entirely offline.[3]

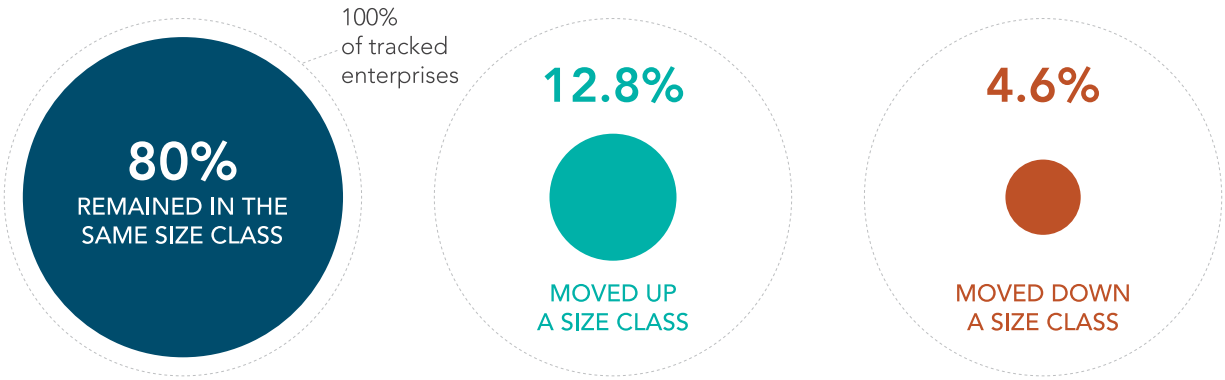
Evidence from the Dun & Bradstreet MSME universe

Analysis of a sample of MSMEs from the Dun & Bradstreet universe corroborates the structural pattern suggested by national data.



Circle areas are proportional to each share; the dotted ring represents 100% of tracked enterprises. Movement in either direction is uncommon; for every enterprise that changed size class, roughly five did not.Dun & Bradstreet MSME universe. Each share is reported on the same base of tracked enterprises.

D&B MSME Universe: Growth is real but fragile

Analysis of a sample of 56,829 MSMEs from the D&B MSME Universe with three consecutive years of financial data indicates that growth is evident, although its pace and consistency vary across enterprises. Revenue momentum is more widespread than sustained profit growth, and most firms remained within the same size class over the period. The findings also show that meaningful business activity extends beyond Tier 1 cities. Overall, the sample presents a sector that is growing, with further scope for more enterprises to translate that momentum into stronger profitability, greater scale and wider market participation.

D&B DATA SPOTLIGHT

D&B MSME Universe: Growth is real but fragile

Growth is visible across the base, with many enterprises expanding revenue over the past three years.

Profit growth is less widespread, and most enterprises remained in the same size class. Activity is broad-based, extending well beyond India's Tier 1 cities.

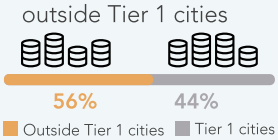
55% of total revenue in the sample comes from outside Tier 1 cities



Two-thirds of MSMEs are growing revenue. Only one in ten is converting that into strong profit growth year-on-year — and four in five are not changing size at all.

Four frictions define the MSME operating reality

The financial picture points to a sector with visible momentum, but also to the conditions that influence how consistently that momentum can translate into scale. Across the wider MSME landscape, access to formal finance remains limited, most firms operate at micro scale, digital adoption remains uneven, and only a small proportion participate in export markets.

These challenges do not exist in isolation. Limited access to finance can constrain investment in technology and capability building. Small operating scale can make it harder to attract talent, access new markets or absorb periods of volatility. Gaps in digital adoption can reduce productivity and limit access to formal financial services, while low export participation restricts opportunities for market diversification and growth.

Taken together, these factors create a set of structural frictions that influence how effectively MSMEs can convert business activity into sustained profitability, productivity and scale. Understanding these frictions is essential to understanding both the progress already achieved and the barriers that continue to shape enterprise growth.

Four frictions define the MSME operating reality

CAPITAL	SCALE	DIGITAL FOUNDATIONS	MARKET ACCESS
THE EXTERNAL EVIDENCE	THE EXTERNAL EVIDENCE	THE EXTERNAL EVIDENCE	THE EXTERNAL EVIDENCE
Only 14% of MSMEs access formal credit. The credit gap is estimated at INR 25–30 lakh crore.	The registered base is overwhelmingly micro — few firms reach the size where technology investment compounds.	46.2% of MSMEs operate fully offline, and 52.6% say identifying the right digital tools is difficult.	Micro firms face the sharpest market-access barriers; digital channels materially improve reach and funding access.

Joint MD & Joint CEO
63SATS Cybertech

How does 63SATS Cybertech turn emerging cyber threats into security solutions for businesses of different sizes?

Cyber threats do not respect company size. A forty-person exporter and a national bank face the same attackers, often the same malware. What differs is the budget and the people available to fight back. So we built one defence system and made it fit three markets. For large enterprises, we run security operations round the clock, with our own people watching, hunting and responding. For government and critical infrastructure, we build sovereign-grade defence that stays under Indian control. For consumers and small businesses, we compressed that same capability into something simple enough for anyone to use. Every threat we see on a bank's network teaches the system that protects a kirana store. We do not write reports. We build and run the defence.

How is AI changing cyber threats, and how is 63SATS Cybertech adapting its security solutions to address them?

The attacker is no longer human. AI now writes phishing emails in flawless Hindi and Tamil, clones a CFO's voice in minutes, and probes thousands of networks at once. A compromise that once took weeks unfolds in hours. Attacks have become cheaper, faster and personal. Our answer is to fight machine speed with machine speed. We have rebuilt our security operations around AI that detects, investigates and contains threats on its own, with analysts supervising rather than typing. We have set up a dedicated AI defence research unit to study how attackers use these models before those tactics reach Indian businesses. And as companies deploy AI agents of their own, we are building the controls to secure them. You cannot defend against an AI-driven attack with a human-only response.

Which cybersecurity needs and market opportunities will shape 63SATS Cybertech's growth over the next five years?

Three forces will shape the next five years. First, regulation. The Digital Personal Data Protection law, along with guidance from CERT-In, RBI and SEBI, is turning cybersecurity from a discretionary spend into a board obligation. We see that as a welcome catalyst, not a burden. Second, the mid-market. India's growth companies are digitising faster than they can secure themselves, and they need outcomes, not tools. Managed defence for this segment is our largest opportunity. Third, sovereignty. Government and critical infrastructure increasingly want defence built and controlled in India, and we are positioned squarely there. Underneath all three sits our shift from services to our own intellectual property. India should not just consume cybersecurity. It should build it and export it. ■

How is Android Enterprise simplifying the deployment and secure management of work devices for Indian businesses?

Android Enterprise streamlines the management of work devices for Indian organizations by providing a standardized, secure framework that operates consistently across the country's highly diverse mobile hardware ecosystem spanning mobiles, smartphones, signages, POS, smartboards and much more. As Indian businesses scale mobile-first operations and hybrid workforces, IT teams such as those at IIFL Finance use this platform to provide enterprise-grade security across their fleet of Android devices. This is made possible by various offerings such as Zero Touch for scaled enrollment, Work Profile for secure personal and corporate data separation and Device Trust for the real-time health and compliance verification of any Android device before granting access to corporate data and applications.

As AI becomes part of everyday work, how is Android Enterprise helping businesses use it productively while protecting company data?

Android Enterprise enables businesses to safely integrate AI by balancing productivity with strict data governance through three core mechanisms:

- Isolated Environments: The Work Profile containerizes corporate data, preventing sensitive information from leaking into unauthorized, consumer-grade AI apps on the user's personal profile.
- Granular Policy Controls: IT can mitigate data scraping by blocking screen captures, restricting cross-profile copy-pasting, and enforcing allow-lists to ensure employees only use vetted, enterprise-approved AI tools.
- Secure Local Processing: By utilizing on-device AI such as Gemini Nano, Android supports "zero egress" AI. This allows employees to leverage advanced AI locally, ensuring data is processed (e.g. summarization, image description, transcription and translation) locally.

These controls empower organizations to confidently adopt AI workflows without compromising proprietary data.

How will Redington's reach and partner ecosystem support Android Enterprise's growth journey in India?

Redington has been a trusted partner for Google across product areas such as Google Cloud, Workspace, Chromebooks and Android. Over the past several years, it has been a key growth driver for Android Enterprise as a Silver Partner in our Partner Program, helping Android Enterprise reach not just large enterprises in metros but also over 300 tier-2 and tier-3 cities through a hub-and-spoke model. With more than 50% of Redington's enterprise channel partners engaged in SMB business, we have a strong ecosystem to expand Android Enterprise adoption across the SMB segment. As a B2B distributor and Zero Touch reseller with pan-India reach, Redington enables cost-effective, scaled deployment of Android fleets, including in remote parts of the country. ■

Bhadresh Pathak
EVP and Business Head
SuFin Limited

How is SuFin simplifying industrial procurement for MSMEs through digital product discovery and verified sellers?

SME supply chains are traditionally fragmented, making product and price discovery difficult. SuFin offers a systematic, digitally powered way to find the right product at desired commercial terms through an AI-powered Request for Quotation (RFQ) mechanism. Customers can specify technical requirements, and the RFQ reaches relevant Sellers who respond with price, terms and fulfilment timelines. This expedites buying and selling, with seamless execution from order generation to delivery, while improving efficiency, reducing manual coordination and driving cost savings.

MSMEs are also wary of unknown counterparties due to concerns around quality and timely payments. SuFin conducts due diligence and provides a Trust Seal, giving Buyers greater confidence in quality and delivery, while giving Sellers confidence in timely payments.

How is SuFin using AI to help MSMEs find the right products and make better purchasing decisions?

AI is becoming an important enabler in simplifying B2B commerce for MSMEs, with intelligence embedded across the customer journey for faster, more accurate decision-making.

Our AI-led approach makes product information structured and accessible, helping Buyers identify products matching their requirements. AI is also used in product cataloguing to improve the speed, consistency and quality of SKU onboarding.

Beyond product discovery, Conversational AI enables support teams to access backend information through natural-language queries, including order and payment details. This helps them respond faster while reducing operational burden.

Our objective is to use AI where it creates tangible value, reducing transaction time, improving first-time-right accuracy, operational burden and strengthening customer experience.

Beyond procurement, how is SuFin helping MSMEs make smarter business decisions and support future growth?

For us, the opportunity extends beyond being a marketplace. MSMEs need an ecosystem that supports procurement while improving access to capital and markets. SuFin helps clients avail trade finance to enable transactions and earn cash discounts through improved liquidity, making their businesses working-capital neutral. SuFin also helps MSMEs take smarter credit calls on counterparties through its Trust Seal framework. Its logistics capabilities enable timely and transparent delivery.

We are also expanding our private-label portfolio. Solido brings together safety and welding products, while Gravis focuses on building materials such as tiles, wall putty and gypsum plaster, giving MSMEs greater choice through a trusted platform.

Our objective is to become a trusted digital partner for MSMEs, helping them discover the right products, access suppliers and buyers, access liquidity through the right financing solutions, and enable reliable delivery through a one-stop digital platform. SuFin is becoming an integral part of the supply chain for both Buyers and Sellers.

About SuFin Limited

SuFin Limited, a Group Company of Larsen & Toubro Limited, is a digital B2B marketplace focused on simplifying industrial procurement and enabling access to financing, logistics and trusted business networks for MSMEs across India. ■

Mangesh Wadaje
Chairman & CEO
Highbar Technocrat Limited

How does Highbar's industry expertise strengthen SAP implementation for EC&O, infrastructure, and real estate companies?

Highbar was born inside a construction company, not inside a software company. That distinction shapes everything we do. Our teams have lived through monsoon-hit schedules, subcontractor RA bills, BOQ revisions, and plant idling at remote sites. So when we walk into a client's blueprint workshop, we are not asking what a WBS or retention or escalation clause or FSI norms are. We are showing how peer organisations have already solved it in SAP.

Our implementations start from an industry template rather than a blank canvas. We bring pre-configured processes across PS, MM, PM, RE-FX, IS-U and S/4HANA, mapped to how EC&O, infrastructure and real estate businesses actually run. The result is shorter discovery cycles, far fewer custom developments, and cleaner adoption of standard SAP. Every unnecessary Z-development is a future upgrade cost. Our clients moving to RISE with SAP inherit a cleaner core because of choices made at day one.

How are Highbar AI dashboards improving visibility and decision-making across mall management, real estate, and infrastructure projects?

Most organisations in our sectors have plenty of data and very little visibility. Information sits in ERP, in site registers, in contractor emails—and by the time it reaches a review meeting it is few weeks old and contested. Our Highbar Intelligence Hub closes that gap across four domains: Project, Finance, Procurement and Equipment.

In real estate, it connects inventory, bookings, collections and cost-to-complete so pricing and cash-flow decisions are made on current numbers. In infrastructure, it tracks progress against planned cost, equipment utilisation and material consumption at the site level, flagging slippage before it becomes a claim.

The shift is from reporting to intelligence. The system surfaces exceptions, explains variance, and increasingly answers questions in plain language. A project manager at site and a director in Mumbai now argue from the same version of the truth, which is where better decisions begin.

Which sectors and business functions will Highbar prioritize as it expands its AI-led solutions?

Sector-wise, we are deepening where we are already strongest: construction, real estate, and urban infrastructure covering transport, water and utilities. Energy and renewables is our next area of investment.

Function-wise, my test is simple: Which of these does your team still do by hand? Payment vouchers. Fuel and travel claims. Contract clauses. Tender documents. Candidate CVs. Asset reporting. For most of our clients the honest answer is at least two or three. We have built AI agents for everyone—running on the existing landscape the client already owns. No new platform, no migration, no retraining.

Enterprise AI fails when it arrives as yet another system to maintain. Ours sits inside the existing landscape and takes over repetitive validation that currently consumes skilled people. From there, our roadmap follows where money and risk concentrate: procurement, project controls, finance, asset lifecycle, and site safety. All built with governance, auditability and data security designed in from the start. ■

Ravishankar P
CEO
Matrix Business Services

How is technology changing the way Matrix verifies employees, business data, and transactions for growing enterprises?

Technology is the backbone of change at Matrix. Reimagining business process, data structures, and digitising process with or without use of AI are the primary levers we use at Matrix to transform both internal process and business process of clients. This is absolutely essential to keep pace with business needs. For eg, We have upgraded our inhouse platform Matex – to create a completely new version of the service which we are branding as MatrixVerify. Now, some of the digital checks in our employee background verification is done instantaneously. Data flows seamlessly from client systems, our systems and vendor partner systems. Similarly we use AI to make calls, recognize images, process transactions – all of which help us meet demanding client needs. Clients don't wait for the ecosystem to improve, it is upto service providers like us to push for ecosystem change by adapting to latest technology.

What are the most common sources of revenue leakage as businesses scale, and how can stronger assurance processes address them?

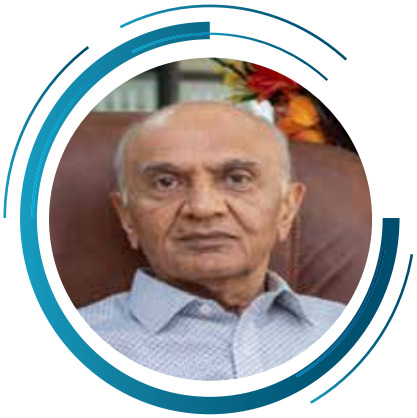
Business Assurance covers two parts, revenue leakage and loss prevention. We operate on both sides. Our trade promotion management processes help clients monitor their ROI on trade promotions – both through identifying revenue leakage and plugging wasteful costs. Across Retail, FMCG, Ecom/Qcom businesses, plugging inventory losses, frauds, preventing expired/damaged products being reused is something we have been doing for a long time. Similarly fixed asset verification in a distributed system needs a reliable service provider like us who can provide a country wide network to help clients monitor asset existence, condition, and usage. Customer experience verification & enhancement through mystery audits is another core area where we support our clients. Our deep domain expertise and a phygital approach – physical reach supported with digital backbone as much as possible, help clients enhance value.

How can growing enterprises strengthen internal controls without slowing operations or adding unnecessary costs?

Growing enterprises often do not have the bandwidth to implement and execute on internal controls. Secondly, they will also not have budgets to manage fixed costs for implementing the controls. They are better off taking support of experienced partners like Matrix to help them manage this. We help them keep costs variable, and provide value for the efforts which are needed to enhance internal controls. It also becomes our job to be updated with latest technological developments so that our clients can focus on their core business.

What is Matrix's North Star?

Matrix's North Star is all about credibility. We have been in this business for over two decades which by itself is no mean achievement given our business is all about credibility. Most of our growth has happened by referrals from existing client stake holders as they move jobs or when they refer us to peers in other corporates. Adding a digital / AI layer to maintaining this North Star and enhancing speed to service, transparency and customer experience will remain our prime focus. ■



Vinod Patel
Founder Director
Almonard Pvt Ltd

How is Almonard converting product innovation into scalable, cost-competitive growth?

At Almonard, innovation is not about chasing trends — it is about creating measurable value. For us, true innovation means delivering superior-performing products at competitive prices without compromising on quality, durability, or long-term reliability.

Our approach is rooted in optimisation. Whether it is the efficient use of raw materials, engineering smarter product designs, or streamlining internal processes, every investment must strengthen the value chain and improve customer outcomes. We believe every rupee spent should enhance efficiency, performance, and scalability.

This philosophy allows us to convert product innovation into sustainable, cost-competitive growth. By staying focused on customer needs and operational discipline, we continue to build products that are not only technologically sound, but commercially relevant across industries.

Competition keeps every business alert, and we view it as a catalyst for continuous improvement rather than a distraction. Our focus remains on creating greater value for customers and reaching them in the most meaningful ways. When that commitment is consistent, growth becomes a natural outcome.

What key systems or capabilities has Almonard strengthened to support sustained scale?

Almonard has strengthened its foundation for sustained scale through strategic investments across manufacturing, operations, technology, and people. A key milestone in this journey has been the commissioning of our new manufacturing unit in Maharashtra, which significantly enhances our production capacity, improves supply chain flexibility, and enables us to respond faster to evolving market demands across India.

Operationally, we have focused on disciplined raw material planning and robust inventory control systems to improve efficiency, optimize costs, and ensure continuity in an increasingly dynamic business environment. These measures have helped us build a more agile and resilient organization.

On the market side, we have strengthened our digital lead generation and customer outreach capabilities, allowing us to engage more effectively with both industrial and retail customers across geographies. Equally important has been our investment in people and leadership development. We have built empowered teams with strong execution capabilities, while also fostering a culture where leaders are encouraged to make decisions that serve the company's long-term growth, sustainability, and values.

How is Almonard positioning itself to compete in both domestic and global markets?

India remains our core market—our karma-bhoomi. For over five decades, Almonard has built its reputation by serving everyone from SMEs and mid-market enterprises to some of India's largest industrial players. Our focus continues to be on delivering dependable, high-performance solutions tailored to the evolving needs of Indian industry.

Having said that, we are steadily expanding our global footprint. The Middle East continues to emerge as a strong growth market for us despite geopolitical uncertainties, driven by increasing demand for robust industrial ventilation and air management solutions. We also see significant long-term potential in emerging African economies, where industrial infrastructure is rapidly developing. Our strategy is clear: strengthen our leadership at home while building a sustainable and future-ready international presence. ■

RESEARCH FINDINGS: THE AI MOMENT FOR INDIA'S MSMES

The AI Moment for India's MSMEs

In August 2026, Dun & Bradstreet surveyed 210 MSME leaders across 12 industries to understand how AI was moving from interest to application within India's MSME sector. The study examined where businesses were deploying AI, the value being realized from these investments, and the conditions that could support broader adoption. The survey included MSMEs across multiple revenue bands, providing perspectives from companies at different stages of scale and growth.

AI has arrived and it is delivering

The first returns from AI are operational and immediate. Users most often report time savings, better quality, faster decisions and lower manual effort. This pattern suggests that AI is entering through clearly defined tasks where benefits can be observed without requiring a full redesign of the business.

The significance is not simply that MSMEs are experimenting. A majority of users say the benefits justify the spend, while reported cost reductions and early product or service innovation indicate that value is beginning to extend beyond individual productivity.

AI is already producing practical business value

Outcomes AI has delivered so far for MSMEs

The leading outcomes are closely grouped: better quality and accuracy, faster decision-making and reduced manual effort are all reported by more than half of AI users. This shows that the early value proposition is broader than speed alone. AI is helping businesses improve how work is completed as well as how quickly it moves.

Lower cost and improved margins are also material, although they appear less frequently than quality and decision benefits. This is consistent with an adoption pattern in which many firms are still using AI at the task level, where gains accumulate across workflows before becoming fully visible in financial performance.

Managing Director & CEO
Meteoric Biopharmaceuticals Pvt. Ltd.

Meteoric Biopharmaceuticals
ENZYMES · PROBIOTICS · BIO-ACTIVES · FORMULATIONS · ANIMAL HEALTHCARE

What have been the most defining decisions in shaping Meteoric's growth and success?

The company's trajectory has been shaped by a focus on building a science-led, innovation-first organization from the outset. Diversification across Enzymes, Probiotics, Bioactives, Formulations and Animal healthcare enabled Meteoric to evolve into a one-stop solution provider. A key early decision was to invest in research-driven capabilities. The company has also focused on building integrated capabilities spanning R&D, manufacturing, and contract development, supported by quality and regulatory standards. Finally, a strategic emphasis on global expansion, establishing a presence in key markets like the United States.

How has innovation evolved at Meteoric as the company has expanded across products, industries and markets?

Innovation at Meteoric has evolved from a R&D foundation into a science, application, and market needs. Initially centered on enzymes and fermentation-based solutions, the company has progressively expanded into a broader portfolio including probiotics, postbiotics, synbiotics, bioactives, and herbal extracts, catering to diverse industries.

As the business scaled globally, innovation became more application-driven and customer-centric. The focus shifted toward developing customized formulations and contract manufacturing solutions that address specific industry challenges.

Additionally, Meteoric's philosophy of #innovationthroughdiscovery has enabled it to harness science-driven, sustainable solutions, aligning product development with global trends toward clean-label and non-synthetic ingredients. As the company expands into international markets, particularly the United States, innovation is further evolving toward localized R&D capabilities, enabling faster response to market needs and regulatory landscapes.

What capabilities has Meteoric strengthened to support growth across global markets?

To support its global expansion, Meteoric has strengthened capabilities across research, manufacturing, regulatory compliance, and supply chain operations. A key focus has been building robust R&D and production infrastructure, including GMP-certified facilities and advanced laboratories.

The company has also developed strong regulatory and quality compliance frameworks, supported by multiple international certifications such as HACCP, Kosher, Halal, and FSSAI, enabling entry into diverse global markets.

On the commercial side, Meteoric has enhanced its global distribution and logistics capabilities, including establishing operations in the United States to manage procurement, warehousing, compliance, and customer service.

Furthermore, the company is investing in future-ready capabilities by planning new R&D and manufacturing facilities in key markets like the U.S., along with expanding its scientific talent base. ■

Jim Rakesh
Managing Director
ROX Hi-Tech Limited

How has ROX evolved its business from IT infrastructure services to AI, automation, and integrated enterprise solutions?

ROX has evolved from a strong foundation in IT infrastructure and enterprise systems integration into a broader digital transformation partner for enterprises. While infrastructure continues to remain an important part of our business, we have progressively expanded our capabilities across cloud, cybersecurity, enterprise applications, intelligent automation, and Artificial Intelligence.

This progress has been driven by the changing needs of our customers. Enterprises today require more than technology products. They need integrated solutions that connect infrastructure, applications, data and business processes. ROX has therefore focused on building capabilities that enable customers to modernise their technology landscape while delivering measurable business outcomes.

This transformation represents a strategic shift from being primarily an infrastructure solutions provider to becoming an integrated technology partner, delivering end-to-end capabilities that support the Edge-to-AI digital transformation journey of our customers.

What has ROX learned about adapting its solutions and delivery model while expanding into international markets?

ROX's expansion into international markets has reinforced an important lesson. While technology may be global, customer expectations, business processes and market dynamics are often shaped by regional realities. Success therefore requires the ability to combine global technology expertise with a strong understanding of regional business requirements.

Our international journey has also strengthened the importance of building strong relationships and collaborating closely with technology partners and customers. By combining on-ground engagement with our broader delivery capabilities, ROX is able to deliver solutions that reflect the unique needs of each customer, backed by specialised expertise and global best practices.

Ultimately, our experience has demonstrated that international growth is not simply about taking the same solutions to new markets. It is about understanding international business environments, adapting to customer needs and delivering solutions that create meaningful value while drawing on the scale, experience and capabilities of a global technology organisation.

How has becoming an NSE-listed company influenced ROX's governance, growth priorities, and approach to investor confidence?

Becoming an NSE-listed company has been an important milestone in ROX's journey and has further strengthened our commitment to strong corporate governance and responsible business conduct. The transition has sharpened our focus on structured processes, compliance, financial discipline and robust reporting practices across the organisation.

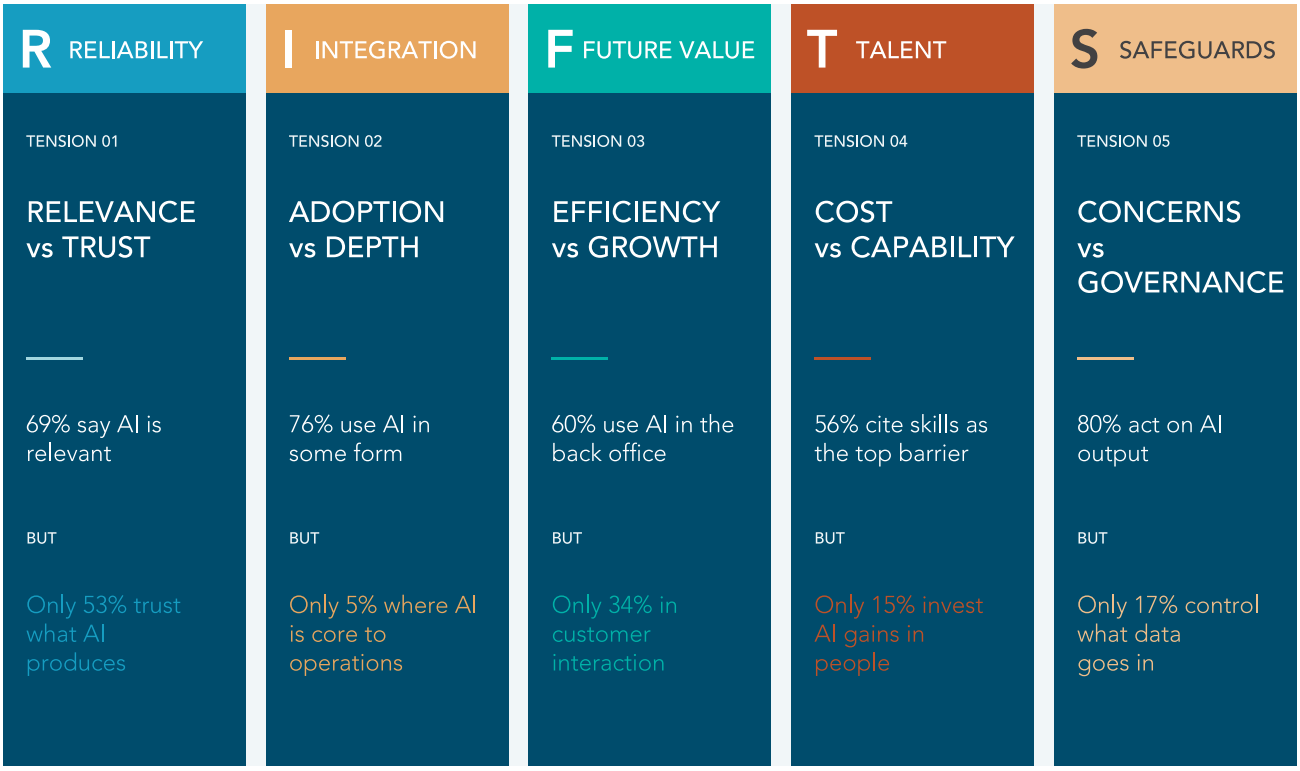
Investor confidence is built through consistent execution, transparent communication and the ability to deliver on our commitments. We therefore remain focused on maintaining high standards of governance, providing timely and meaningful disclosures, and demonstrating clear progress against our strategic priorities.

Ultimately, the listing has reinforced a culture of accountability across ROX. It has strengthened our focus on creating long-term value for all stakeholders including—our customers, employees, partners, shareholders and the broader ecosystem—while building a resilient organisation positioned for sustainable growth. ■

D&B's RIFTS Framework: Five gaps between AI use and AI advantage

Survey findings suggest that the central challenge facing MSMEs is no longer whether AI is being adopted, but whether that adoption can translate into sustained business advantage. To examine this distance, Dun & Bradstreet developed the RIFTS framework. It identifies five interconnected dimensions that determine whether AI remains a useful tool or becomes a repeatable source of business value: Reliability, Integration, Future Value, Talent and Safeguards. Together, these dimensions show where progression most often slows as businesses move from initial experimentation towards deeper and more strategic use.

RIFTS: Five gaps between AI use and AI advantage



D&B's RIFTS framework describes the distance between current use and sustained advantage.

Reliability: Belief in AI is broad; trust in its output is still forming MSME leaders have largely crossed the first threshold of adoption: they recognize AI's relevance, increasingly consider it affordable and are aware that competitors are already using it. Affordability represents a particularly important shift, with 60% saying AI is within reach for a business of their size and only 8% disagreeing. For a segment that has historically faced high barriers to enterprise technology, easier access is allowing more businesses to experiment without significant upfront investment.

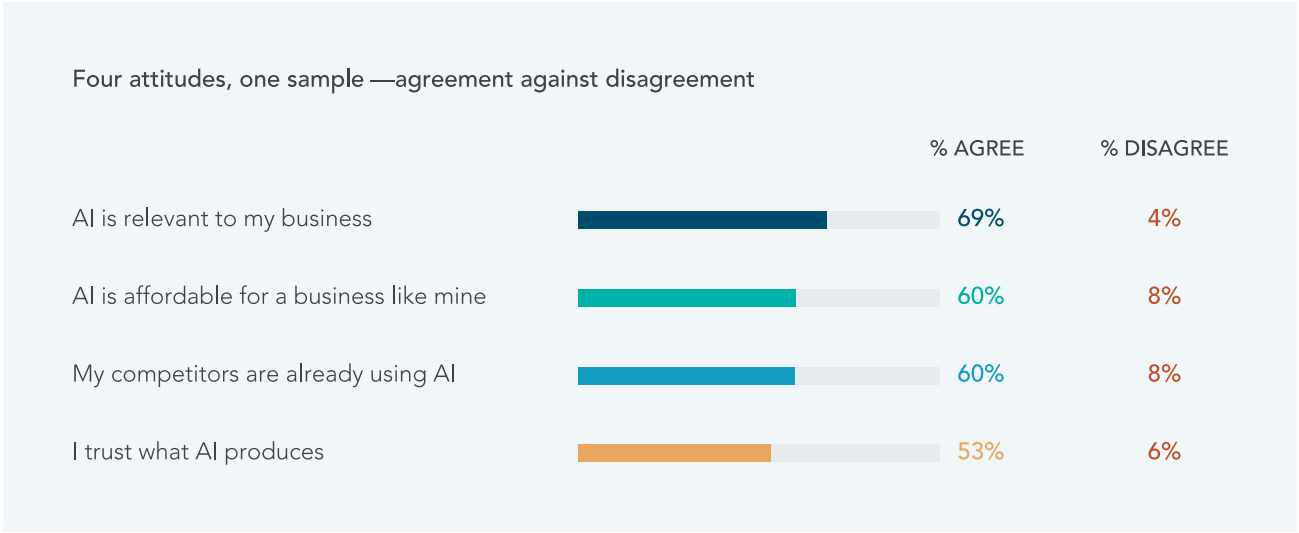
The more consequential gap now lies between believing in AI and relying on it. While 53% trust what AI produces and only 6% disagree, 40% remain neutral. This points to an undecided middle rather than active resistance. Confidence is likely to be earned through repeated use, stronger inputs and visible evidence that the technology works in comparable businesses, with 53% identifying proof from similar firms as an important accelerator. Reliability, therefore, is not simply a measure of technical accuracy. It reflects whether an enterprise has the information, validation practices and operating discipline needed to use AI outputs consistently in business decisions.

MSMES' awareness, attitude and triggers for AI adoption



Source: Dun & Bradstreet Research

Integration: Adoption is established; depth is where the distance opens

AI adoption among surveyed MSMEs is already substantial, but the pattern of use reveals a clear divide between access and integration. While 24% report no adoption, 35% are experimenting informally and 37% have progressed to automating selected tasks. Only 5% describe AI as core to their operations through intelligent or autonomous workflows. The central gap is therefore not between adopters and non-adopters alone. It is between businesses using AI as a collection of individual tools and those connecting it to repeatable processes, verified information and established ways of working.

THE AI ADOPTION LADDER — WHERE THE MSMEs SIT TODAY
SHALLOW → DEEP

24%
No adoption
No AI in use, no current plans

35%

37%
Task-level automation

5%

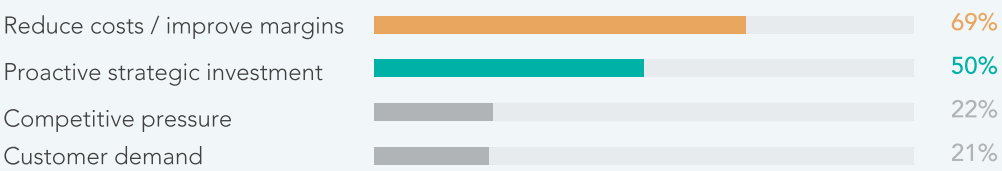
The motivation for adoption is firmly grounded in business value. Reducing costs or improving margins is the leading driver, cited by 69% of respondents, while 50% view AI as a proactive strategic investment. Competitive pressure and customer demand are less influential, at 22% and 21% respectively. This helps explain why deployment is concentrated in back-office functions and internal operations, where tasks are repeatable and returns are easier to observe. Integration is the point at which these isolated gains begin to compound. By connecting AI to workflows rather than individual tasks, businesses can turn occasional productivity improvements into more consistent and scalable operating performance.

What is driving adoption



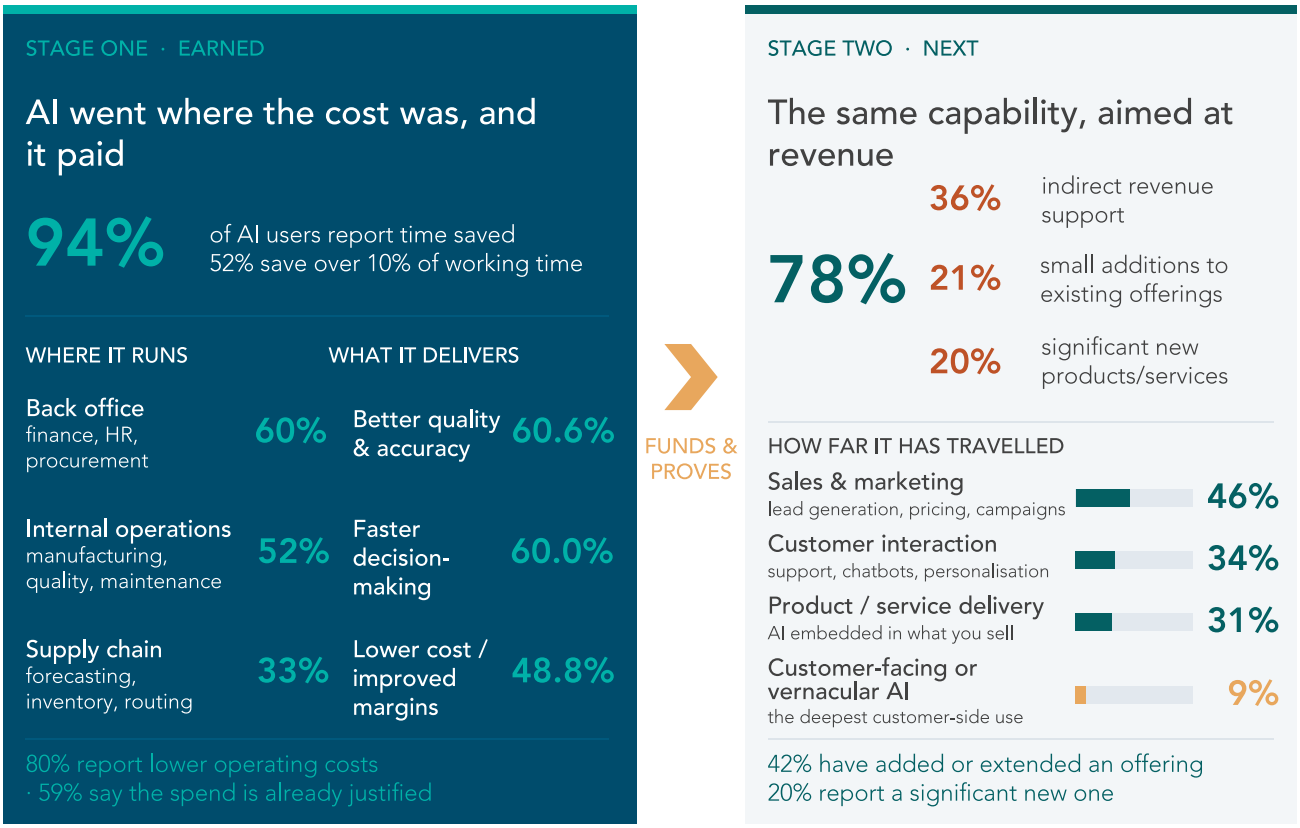
Cost is the dominant motive, and it is acted on where cost sits: 60% deploy AI in back-office functions and 52% in internal operations.

Source: Dun & Bradstreet Research

Future Value: The efficiency dividend is being earned; growth is the next stage

AI has gained traction among MSMEs by addressing immediate operational priorities. Its concentration in back-office functions, internal operations and supply chains reflects a pragmatic path to adoption: businesses are starting where costs are visible, processes are repeatable and results can be measured relatively quickly. The gains extend beyond time savings to better quality, faster decisions and improved cost efficiency. These outcomes are important not only for the value they create today, but also because they establish evidence that AI investment can generate tangible returns.

The next test is whether this efficiency dividend can become a growth dividend. AI's current contribution to revenue comes largely through indirect support and incremental improvements to existing offerings, while significant new products, services and customer-facing applications remain less common. Most MSMEs are therefore using AI to improve the economics of their current business models rather than to create new ones. The distinction is important. Efficiency can release resources and strengthen confidence, but future value will depend on whether businesses can reinvest those gains in customer engagement, product development and new sources of revenue.



Source: Dun & Bradstreet Research

Talent: Capability, not cost, is the binding constraint on AI value

As AI moves from isolated use cases into a wider set of business activities, value depends increasingly on the capabilities surrounding the technology. Skills and cost may appear to be comparable barriers, but the wider survey pattern points more decisively towards capability. Training is the strongest stated accelerator, while the absence of a clear need is the least-cited barrier. MSMEs therefore appear less constrained by uncertainty over whether AI is relevant than by uncertainty over how to apply it effectively. Cost determines whether a business can acquire a tool; capability determines whether it can select the right problem, supply the right information and convert use into repeatable value.

The capability gap also changes as adoption progresses. For non-adopters, it is primarily an orientation gap: businesses need help identifying where to begin and evidence that AI can work in companies similar to their own. For adopters, it becomes a development and investment gap. Training is widely recognized as necessary, but relatively few businesses direct the gains generated by AI towards building people's capabilities. Adoption could therefore expand faster than the skills required to deepen it. Sustainable value will depend on treating talent development as part of the AI investment itself, rather than as a later intervention once tools have already entered the business.

AI accelerators and barriers

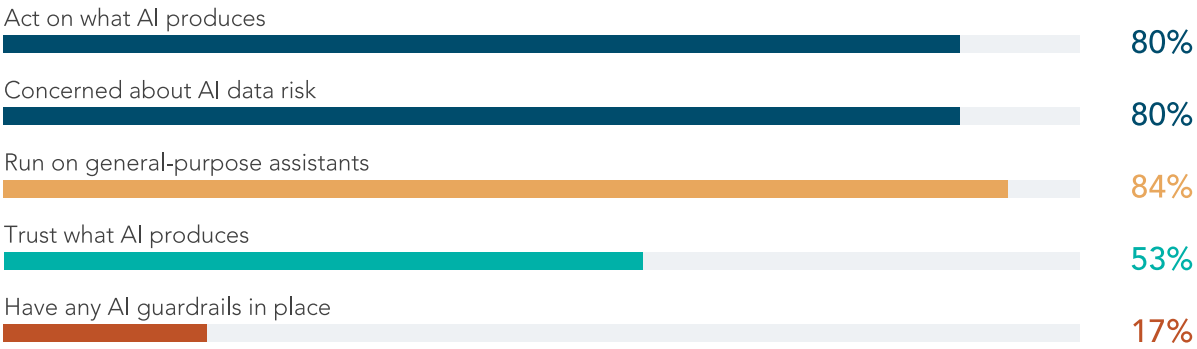
Safeguards: The missing piece in AI governance is the data going in

The governance gap is not one of awareness, but of execution. MSMEs are conscious of data risk even as AI outputs increasingly inform business decisions. Yet the limited presence of guardrails, combined with the widespread use of general-purpose assistants, means that adoption is often progressing without equivalent control over the quality, completeness and appropriateness of the information supplied to AI.

This shifts the focus of governance from the output alone to the full decision chain. An AI response can only be as relevant as the business context available to it. Where records are fragmented or AI tools are disconnected from verified systems, confident outputs may still rest on incomplete information. Effective governance must therefore connect four elements: a reliable source of business data, clear rules for what can be shared with AI, validation of the response and human accountability for the resulting decision.

WHAT THE SURVEY SHOWS



Governance has been framed around outputs —what AI might leak or get wrong. The survey says the exposure starts earlier: four in five act on AI output, while fewer than one in five control what the model is given.

The risk is not only that AI leaks something —it is that AI is confidently wrong, because it was never given the business's own data to be right with.

WHY IT STARTS WITH THE INPUT, NOT THE OUTPUT

01	THE DATA YOU HOLD Ledgers, GST returns, inventory and customer records — part-digital, part-paper, rarely reconciled.	60% at digital maturity Level 3 or below
02	THE DATA YOU FEED What actually reaches the model — usually a pasted paragraph, not the firm's verified records.	84% use assistants with no link to their systems
03	THE ANSWER YOU GET Fluent, confident output built from generic context rather than the firm's operating reality.	Only 53.4% trust what AI produces
04	THE DECISION YOU MAKE Pricing, purchasing, credit and hiring calls taken on that output, with no trace back to a source.	80% act on it; 17% govern the input

Strategic implication: govern the input, not just the output — a source of truth, a live connection into Tally, CRM and ERP, curated AI-eligible data and a named human reviewer.

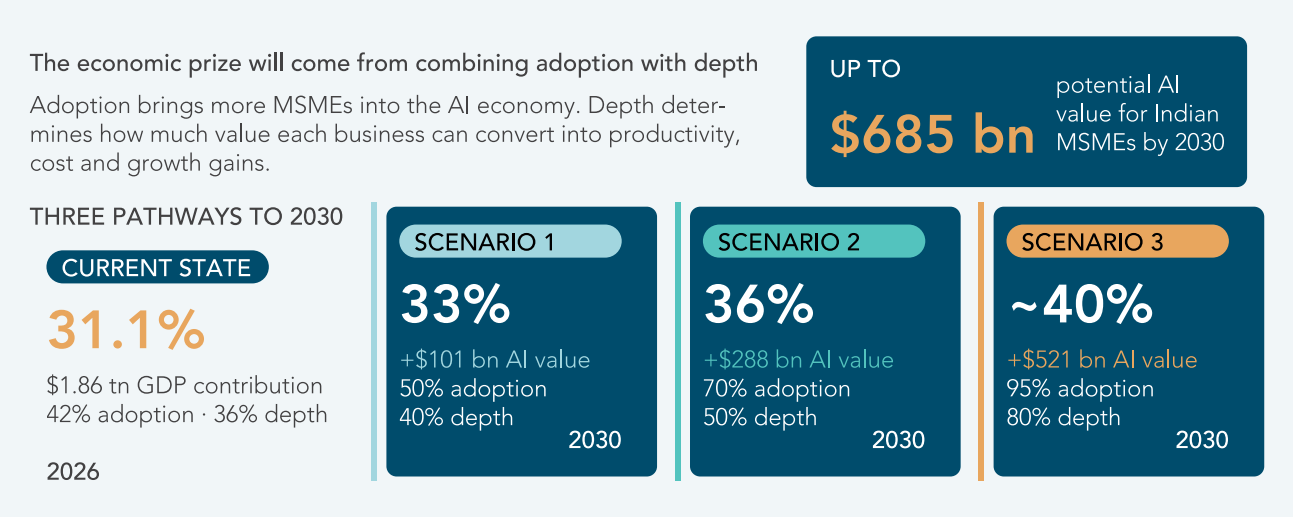
Deeper AI adoption could lift MSMEs' GDP contribution

The World Economic Forum (WEF) estimates that AI could unlock between $490 billion and $685 billion in economic value for Indian MSMEs by 2030[4] through productivity improvements, cost efficiencies and financial inclusion. The WEF analysis also recognizes that potential value and realized value are not the same. Its value-realization estimate assumes 20% MSME adoption and 20% implementation depth, establishing that economic impact depends on both the spread of AI and the extent to which it is applied within each business. Building on this relationship, Dun & Bradstreet modelled three alternative pathways using responses from the survey of 210 MSME leaders as the baseline. Adoption captures the proportion of MSMEs using AI in structured applications, while implementation depth reflects the business significance of that use. In the D&B model, depth combines three dimensions captured in the survey: the level of workflow autonomy, the extent of cost efficiencies realized and AI's contribution to revenue. It therefore distinguishes task-level adoption from AI use that is more deeply connected to operating and commercial outcomes.

The scenarios show that the economic opportunity expands most strongly when adoption and depth advance together. Wider adoption increases the number of MSMEs participating in the opportunity, but shallow use limits the value generated by each adopter. Greater depth strengthens the value realized from the same adoption base by extending AI into more consequential workflows and outcomes. The movement towards the higher scenarios is therefore not simply a story of more businesses using AI. It is a shift towards more meaningful implementation across the MSME sector. This analysis provides the bridge between the two D&B frameworks. RIFTS identifies the gaps that limit deeper implementation, while LEAP sets out the sequence through which MSMEs can address them. Progress on reliability, integration, talent and safeguards is what allows adoption to translate into greater depth and, ultimately, a larger share of the economic opportunity.

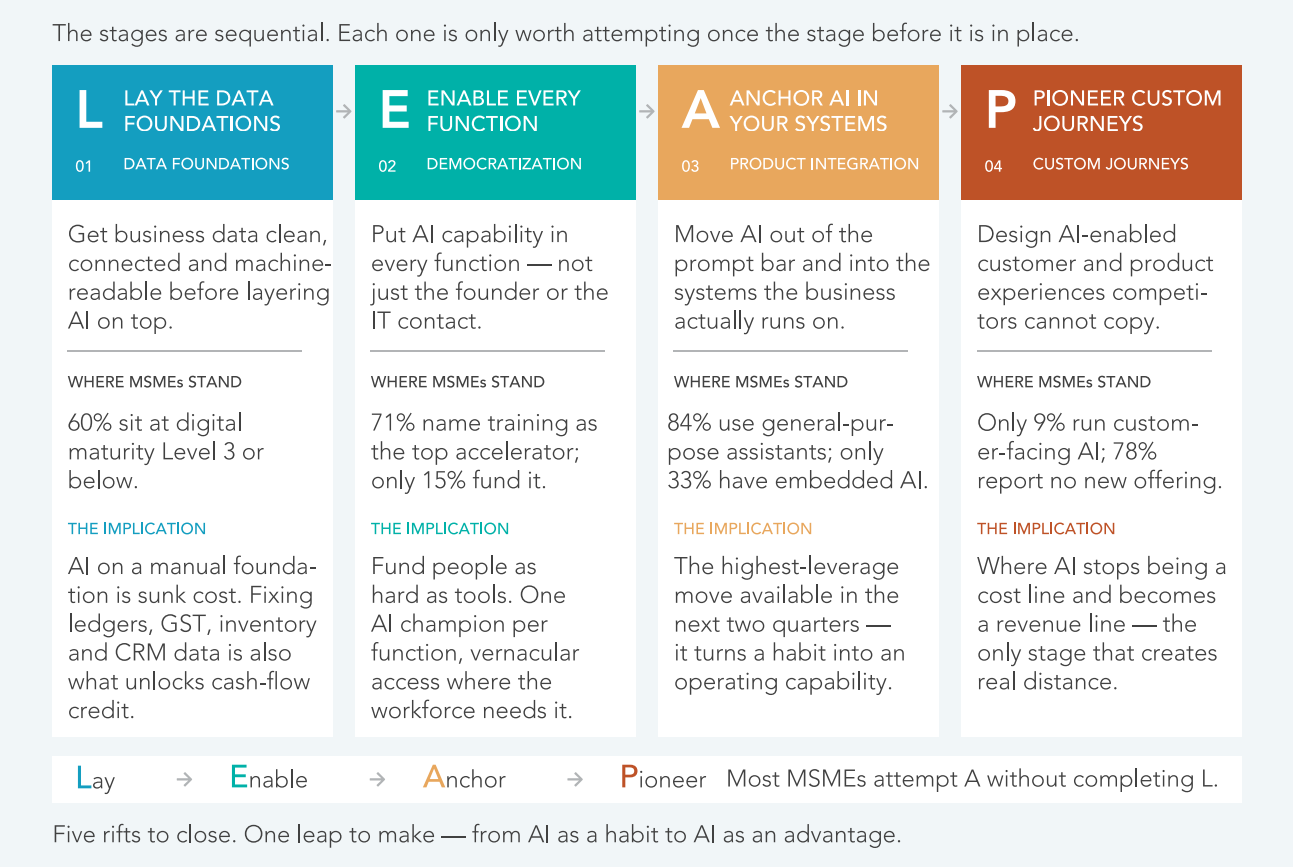


[4] WEF 'Transforming Small Businesses' AI Playbook, with BCG X and India's MeitY / IndiaAI Mission

LEAP: Four moves from AI use to AI advantage

The five RIFTS identified in the research are closely connected. Limited data readiness affects the reliability of AI outputs; weak capabilities restrict adoption to a small number of users; standalone tools prevent AI from becoming part of repeatable workflows; and shallow integration limits its contribution to customer and product value. Dun & Bradstreet developed the LEAP framework to address these dependencies through a clear sequence: Lay the Data Foundations, Enable Every Function, Anchor AI in Your Systems and Pioneer Custom Journeys.

The order of these moves is central to the framework. Clean and connected data gives AI the business context required to produce relevant outputs. Wider functional capability enables teams to apply those outputs effectively. Integration with the systems on which the business operates turns individual usage into a repeatable capability. Only then can MSMEs apply AI more meaningfully to customer experiences, products and services. Attempting to integrate or scale AI without first strengthening data and talent may expand usage, but it is unlikely to create the same depth of value.



Source: Dun & Bradstreet Research

Lay the Data Foundations by making core business information clean, connected and machine-readable. For many MSMEs, this means strengthening the underlying records across finance, inventory, customer management and other operating systems before adding further AI applications. This foundation improves both the relevance of AI outputs and the business's ability to use data more effectively.

Enable Every Function by extending AI capability beyond the founder, senior leadership or IT contact. The objective is not to create specialists in every team, but to equip functions with sufficient knowledge to identify relevant use cases, apply AI appropriately and review the results. This is where investment in people becomes as important as investment in tools.

Anchor AI in Your Systems by moving from standalone prompting to integration with the platforms and workflows employees already use. Connecting AI with verified business systems allows information to flow more consistently, reduces dependence on manually supplied context and turns isolated use into an operating capability.

Pioneer Custom Journeys by applying the stronger foundation to customer and product experiences. At this stage, AI moves beyond improving existing work and begins to influence how the business serves customers, reaches markets and develops offerings. This is where AI has the potential to shift from an efficiency lever to a source of differentiation and growth.

Managing Director
Allengers Medical Systems Limited

Allengers
Passion for excellence

How does Allengers identify healthcare needs that can be addressed through new or improved medical equipment?

I believe meaningful innovation begins by listening before designing. Healthcare professionals experience challenges every day that may never appear in a technical specification—workflow pressures, infrastructure constraints, patient comfort, equipment uptime and the need to make faster, more confident clinical decisions.

At Allengers, we remain closely connected with clinicians, hospitals, Radiologists/ technicians and our Allengers team. Their experience, combined with insights from our installed base across diverse healthcare environments, becomes an important input for our R&D team.

This approach has shaped our evolution from conventional X-ray systems into a broader portfolio spanning Digital Radiography, DRF, C-Arms, Cath Labs, Digital Mammography, Holmium Laser, Thulium and Healthcare Software.

What has Allengers learned about adapting its medical equipment for international markets?

Our journey across more than 110 countries has reinforced an important lesson: global expansion in medical technology is not about taking one successful product and offering it everywhere; it is about understanding what makes that product relevant and compliant in each market.

Every healthcare system operates within its own realities—regulatory frameworks, clinical practices, infrastructure, operating conditions and expectations around service. This has taught us to consider these differences early in our product and market strategy and engineer systems with adaptability, reliability and long-term maintainability in mind.

Equally important is regulatory preparedness. Our products and quality systems are supported by internationally recognized certifications and approvals, including US FDA, CE marking, ISO, AERB as applicable to specific products and markets. These are more than market-entry requirements; they reflect the discipline of designing, manufacturing and validating medical equipment against stringent quality and safety expectations.

We have learned that international growth is built on compliance, relevance and trust—not simply reach. Certification enables access, but consistent product performance, strong local partnerships, training and dependable after-sales support are what build lasting confidence in a global brand.

How has Allengers scaled manufacturing and service support while maintaining product quality and regulatory standards?

Growth becomes meaningful only when quality grows with it. As Allengers has expanded, we have consciously focused on strengthening processes, capabilities and accountability alongside manufacturing capacity.

Our integrated approach across R&D, software, manufacturing, quality and service gives us greater control over the complete product lifecycle. Structured quality systems, rigorous testing, regulatory compliance, continuous training and feedback from the field help us maintain consistency as volumes and markets expand.

At the same time, technology alone cannot build lasting trust. Medical equipment is a long-term commitment to the healthcare provider. That is why strengthening service capabilities has remained integral to our growth.

For me, scale is not measured only by how many systems we manufacture or markets we enter; it is measured by how consistently we can deliver quality, reliability and confidence wherever Allengers is present. ■

Shivraj Anand
CEO - International Business
Parijat Industries

Uday Raj Anand
CEO - Domestic Business
Parijat Industries

In what ways does Parijat's domestic business turn farmer insights into products and strategies that scale across India's diverse agricultural markets?

We have a very robust product discovery process through our inter-disciplinary Product Identification and Development Council, which as a matter of routine collects insights gathered from farmers into need-gap analysis which becomes the seed of innovation at Parijat. Our diversified business does not just leverage insights from one Indian state to another but applies learnings from our international operations to develop hypothesis for emerging pest segments in India. We also aim to be thought leaders in the use of digital technologies for both gathering and leveraging farmer insights for our business through our partnership with Plantix, one of the leading farmer facing apps in India. — UDAY

What guides Parijat's international business in selecting markets and adapting products, registrations, and partnerships across regulatory environments?

Parijat chooses niche markets with high barriers to entry, both regulatory and distribution. This has resulted in our subsidiaries across West Africa, Tanzania and Russia contributing a significant portion of our investment and sales.

Additionally, Parijat has also signed a global cooperation agreement with the multibillion-dollar Helm AG which gives the company great access to entrenched distribution channels in the Americas.

With over 80% of Parijat's export revenue coming from branded formulation sales, Parijat focusses on key parters to steward its patented and proprietary portfolio across the 65+ countries we work in. — SHIVRAJ

How do Parijat's domestic and international businesses leverage shared R&D and manufacturing capabilities while meeting distinct market needs?

Parijat's key strength lies in its diversification across countries, products, customers and agroclimatic zones. This allows us to weather the multiple variables that come along with working in an agri facing industry.

The R&D, both chemical and field individually select and register proprietary molecules for the various markets we work in. These are supported by our 4 facilities that are able to manufacture products in a timely manner from 10ml to a 1000 litre tote across every formulation type – be it powder, granule, liquid etc. — SHIVRAJ

We have been able to participate in certain niche molecules in the Indian market based on the fact that we are able to access an international market to create the justified scale required for technical manufacturing. This allows us to bring certain products into the Indian market, that an exclusively domestic focused company wouldn't be able to feasibly do. Similarly insights from our international business have enabled us to foresee the challenges of Indian farmers and also develop new pathways of innovation. — UDAY ■

Ingram Micro

How is AI changing Ingram Micro's role from a technology distributor to a digital platform and ecosystem partner?

The advent of AI has ushered in a profound transformation across industries. For us at Ingram Micro, it's an opportunity to become an ecosystem orchestrator for the digital empowerment of our partners and create more compelling value across the technology ecosystem. With our AI-powered digital experiential Xvantage platform, we are bringing OEMs, hyperscalers, data-driven insights and digital capabilities together to help partners learn, build, manage, and buy technology-led business solutions through one platform.

We are leveraging AI to simplify complex processes related to technology acquisition, implementation, optimization and disposition. Furthermore, our digital Xvantage platform helps partners accelerate their AI-led transformation journeys through a wide range of cutting-edge features, functionalities and capabilities. One such example is the Xvantage Enable AI program that empowers partners with the digital adeptness required to envision and drive a success-driven AI journey. Similarly, our Xvantage Integration (XI) Hub and Model Context Protocol (MCP) Servers provide a secure integration layer that enables real-time, intelligent connectivity and integration of data, platforms, tools, and AI assistants. All these play a pivotal role in removing friction from our partners' AI journey and enable them to accelerate innovation and drive growth.

What is Ingram Micro doing to help MSMEs adopt cloud, AI, and cybersecurity with confidence?

In India, we are witnessing a distinct set of digital ambitions and digital priorities among SMEs and MSMEs. They are quite passionate about embracing digital-native technologies and accelerating their transformations, and we must offer them effective guidance to help them envision and drive a success-driven digital transformation journey with confidence. At Ingram Micro, we are bridging this gap by bringing together cloud, AI, cybersecurity, solutions, services, and partner expertise through our Xvantage platform. With Xvantage Integration Hub, we are helping businesses move from AI experimentation to real-world adoption by connecting AI with their data, platforms, and tools. This empowers them to accelerate their AI adoption with greater speed and confidence.

Moreover, we also organize a series of multi-city events, SMB TechTalks, that aim to help SMBs leverage the tools, training, capabilities, and go-to-market support required to accelerate their AI-led transformation journeys.

How can technology lifecycle services help growing enterprises reduce the cost and complexity of managing IT assets at scale?

As growing enterprises scale, managing fragmented IT assets can create significant operational complexity and rising costs. Technology lifecycle services simplify this by providing an integrated framework for asset deployment, maintenance, recovery, and disposition.

With over a decade of global expertise, Ingram Micro combines a global footprint with strong local capabilities to help enterprises navigate India's evolving e-waste regulations while ensuring secure, compliant and audit-ready data sanitization. Our ISO- and R2-certified facilities in India, combined with our global standards, make us a trusted partner for leading OEMs and System Integrators. Through certified reuse, refurbishment and remarketing, we maximize residual value, reduce costs and advance sustainability. ■

Shrinivas R. Deshingkar
Founder, Chairman & MD
ShreeTech Data Limited

What strategic choices have helped ShreeTech Data expand its expertise across power, digital infrastructure, telecom, railways, and manufacturing?

One of our most important strategic choices was to focus on digital infrastructure very early. Since 2001, ShreeTech has worked on electrical and power-management infrastructure for data centres, when the industry in India was still at a nascent stage.

Since then, we have worked on more than 100 data centres and executed over 20 large, mission-critical digital infrastructure projects. This gave us a deep understanding of the convergence of reliable power, electrical systems, connectivity, automation and high-availability infrastructure.

Our subsequent expansion into power, telecom, railways and manufacturing has been built around these core engineering competencies. Each has strengthened another capability, enabling ShreeTech to progressively evolve from an electrical engineering company into an integrated digital and critical infrastructure enterprise.

How does ShreeTech Data identify new growth opportunities while building on its established engineering and project execution strengths?

We look at how technology and infrastructure are converging and identify areas where our engineering heritage provides a natural advantage. Our next progression is from executing individual projects to participating across the full digital-infrastructure value chain.

We are expanding into cable landing stations and subsea cable systems and are developing a new international connectivity corridor linking Singapore with Visakhapatnam and Puri. Alongside this, we are building capabilities across data centres, connectivity and AI infrastructure.

Our objective is to create a full-stack ecosystem connecting international subsea capacity with terrestrial networks, data centres and compute infrastructure building upon our established strengths in power, telecom, manufacturing and mission-critical project execution.

What will define ShreeTech Data's next phase of growth, and which capabilities will be most important over the next five years?

Our next phase will be defined by moving from primarily building infrastructure for customers to also developing, owning and operating strategic digital infrastructure.

We plan significant investments in subsea cable systems, cable landing stations, data centres and AI factories, creating infrastructure for hyperscalers, cloud and neocloud service providers, enterprises and AI-driven businesses.

Our vision is an integrated digital infrastructure platform where global connectivity, power, data centres and AI compute operate as one ecosystem. This will require continued engineering excellence together with stronger capabilities in technology partnerships, GPU infrastructure, operations, capital management and global connectivity.

Over the next five years, our ambition is to position ShreeTech as an Indian infrastructure-technology enterprise capable of building and operating the critical infrastructure that will power the next generation of cloud and AI. ■

Partha Paul
Managing Director
Palsons Derma Private Limited

PALSONS DERMA
Passionate about Dermatology

How does Palsons Derma use dermatological research to develop products that meet changing consumer needs?

At Palsons Derma, we believe meaningful innovation begins with understanding real skin and hair concerns. Our product development is guided by dermatological science, feedback from dermatologists and insights from consumers and the market. We continuously observe how lifestyles, environmental exposure and evolving consumer expectations are changing the way people approach skin and hair health.

This helps us identify opportunities where efficacy, safety, sensorial experience and affordability can come together. We focus on developing solutions that are scientifically relevant while also being practical for everyday use. Our close engagement with dermatologists enables us to translate clinical needs understand the gaps , into products that can deliver meaningful consumer outcomes.

What has helped Palsons Derma expand its consumer reach while maintaining the trust of dermatologists?

Our growth has been built on a simple principle: end user acceptance and dermatologist confidence must go together. For the last 3 decades, we have remained focused on developing and marketing products with a strong dermatological orientation rather than pursuing short-term trends.

Our relationships with dermatologists have given us valuable insight into unmet needs, while our expanding presence across pharmacies, clinics, digital channels and other end-user touchpoints has helped make our products more accessible.

We are now combining this foundation with stronger digital capabilities, better consumer engagement and a more systematic approach to understanding market behaviour. The objective is not merely to reach more consumers, but to build informed, long-term relationships with them.

Which growth opportunities will Palsons Derma prioritize as it expands its product portfolio and market presence?

Our next phase of growth will come from a combination of portfolio innovation, deeper market penetration and international expansion. We see significant opportunities across high-growth categories in skincare, haircare and specialised dermatological solutions, particularly where science can address clearly defined patient needs.

Our initiative of specialised dermatology clinics under WIZDERM helps us to holistically fulfil the ecosystem and focus on key L&D endeavours for the dermatology community.

We are also investing in digital transformation, stronger consumer connect and more efficient systems and global scale manufacturing capabilities. Internationally, we see considerable potential for Indian dermatological and cosmeceutical expertise, particularly across emerging markets.

Ultimately, our ambition is to build Palsons Derma into a globally respected dermatology-focused company, combining scientific credibility, consumer understanding and execution excellence. We want our growth to be sustainable—not just larger in scale, but stronger in capability and trust. ■

Amit Agarwal
CEO
EAAA India Alternatives Limited
(Edelwiess Alternatives)

How is the alternative asset management industry emerging as a growth catalyst for India's economic expansion?

India's growth is creating a broad and increasingly diverse opportunity set for capital. Businesses are expanding, infrastructure is developing, new industries are emerging and established assets are evolving. This is creating a growing need for capital that can be flexible, patient and aligned with different stages of opportunity. Alternative asset management has an important role to play in this environment. It connects long-term capital with businesses and assets that are contributing to India's growth, while giving investors access to opportunities beyond traditional asset classes.

What is encouraging is the increasing depth of the ecosystem. Investors are becoming more sophisticated, businesses are becoming more ambitious, and the range of opportunities is expanding across sectors and investment strategies.

Alternative Investment Funds is one of the fastest growing investment segments in India, given its low penetration. The industry brings together capital, expertise and a long-term perspective to participate in India's growth.

What role can alternative capital play in supporting businesses through their growth journey?

Businesses require different forms of capital at different stages of their journey, whether to expand, acquire, transform or scale. Similarly, real assets can benefit from long-term ownership and active management, while special situations may require flexible capital and an engaged partner to unlock their potential.

This is where alternative capital can create differentiated value. In India, private credit, in particular, is increasingly addressing the bespoke capital needs of mid-stage corporates, extending beyond traditional lending to support more differentiated financing requirements. It can provide tailored solutions for growth capital, acquisitions, shareholder liquidity and other strategic requirements, with structures aligned to the specific needs and cash flows of a business.

At Edelweiss Alternatives, we seek to bring together flexible capital, experience and a long-term perspective to support businesses at important stages of their evolution. Our approach is to provide solutions that enable companies to pursue strategic opportunities, execute transformational transactions and strengthen their balance sheets, while preserving greater ownership for promoters and management teams.

Ultimately, alternative capital can go beyond financing. With the right approach and alignment, it can help businesses navigate change, unlock opportunities and create enduring value for all stakeholders.

What has shaped Edelweiss Alternatives' approach to building a institutional platform?

Capability before capital has been the cornerstone of our platform. We believe a strong alternatives business is built over time through experienced teams, rigorous investment discipline and lasting relationships.

Over the years, we have developed a diversified platform across private credit, real assets and private equity, with specialised strategies within each. This allows us to participate in India's growth across businesses, operating assets and opportunities that require differentiated investment approaches. Our investment philosophy remains anchored in disciplined capital deployment, active ownership and long-term alignment with our investors. These principles guide how we evaluate opportunities, make investment decisions.

We see scale as a natural outcome of consistently delivering for our stakeholders and earning their trust over time. As India enters its next phase of growth, our ambition is to continue strengthening our platform, evolve with the opportunity landscape and create lasting value for the investors, businesses and assets we partner with. ■

Viplov JG
Chief Executive Officer
Werner Finley

Werner Finley
Process Cooling Since 1986

How does Werner Finley develop customized cooling solutions for the changing needs of its customers?

Werner Finley serves a diverse range of industries, including manufacturing, process, medical, data centres, energy storage systems, and electric mobility, each with unique thermal management challenges. Our approach combines deep application expertise with modular product platforms that can be rapidly configured to meet specific customer requirements. To stay ahead of evolving market demands, we have established the Integrated Product Strategy and Engineering Group (IPEG), which drives innovation, accelerates product development, and ensures that our solutions remain aligned with emerging technologies, regulatory expectations, and customer performance needs.

What has helped Werner Finley enter international markets and build a sustainable business presence?

Werner Finley's international growth has been strengthened through its strategic joint venture with Glen Dimplex, a globally established organization with operations across North America, Europe, Asia, and other key markets. This partnership has enabled us to combine global expertise with our engineering and manufacturing capabilities, creating opportunities to serve customers beyond India. By leveraging this international network and focusing on application-driven solutions, we have successfully expanded our presence across Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Africa, Europe, and the United States, building long-term relationships and a sustainable global footprint.

Which technologies and market opportunities will shape Werner Finley's growth over the next five years?

Manufacturing, process, and medical applications have been the foundation of Werner Finley's growth and will continue to remain strategically important. At the same time, the global shift toward electrification, digital infrastructure, and sustainable energy is creating significant new opportunities for advanced thermal management solutions. Over the next five years, we expect strong growth from sectors such as battery energy storage systems (BESS), green hydrogen, semiconductor manufacturing, and edge and enterprise data centres. These emerging industries will require increasingly sophisticated cooling technologies and are expected to become key contributors to our future growth trajectory. ■

Vishnu Ajay Anand
President
Faze Three Limited

How does Faze Three turn changing consumer preferences into textile products for global brands and retailers?

Home textile taste moves every season, spring/summer into fall/winter. Our design studio in Mumbai, our New York showroom and our presence at European market weeks put us in front of the trend early, and four decades of making the product tells us what will actually sell on the floor. Because we are vertically integrated from yarn to finished goods across eight factories and build only against confirmed orders, we take a concept from first sketch to first shipment in 45–100 days. We have added nearly every home category in cotton and polyester/MMF, including sustainable and technical constructions. For a buyer that means quick development, lead times you can plan around, and newness landing when the season needs it.

What has helped Faze3 build a sustainable business presence across international markets?

Longevity rather than quick wins. Exports are over 90% of revenue and we hold four decades of relationships with our top 15 accounts — Walmart, Target, TJMaxx group, Action, Lidl, Costco, Williams Sonoma, JYSK and Sainsbury's among them — with no single customer above 15% of revenue in general. That spread across the US, UK and Europe keeps us steady through cycles. Growth has been funded entirely from internal accruals at conservative gearing, so we keep investing and stay price-competitive when the market turns. Globally audited facilities, consistent quality and real ESG investment — 7 MW captive rooftop solar, PNG for processing, Li-ion electric handling — stand behind that. Buyers stay with vendors who ship on time, hold quality and are still there next year.

Which growth opportunities will Faze3 prioritize across home, automotive, and sustainable textiles over the next five years?

Three fronts. In home textiles, China-plus-one is the strongest tailwind in a decade, particularly in polyester/MMF, where China still holds 65% of the market. With INR 1,650 crore of installed capacity running at 55–60% utilization, we can nearly double volume with limited further capex — open capacity a buyer can move a program into now, with PLI support from FY28. In automotive textiles, we are taking the same MMF and technical-fabric capability into a higher-value segment. In sustainable textiles, we keep adding recycled and eco-friendly options across every line as retailers firm up greener sourcing targets. The aim is to double volumes roughly every four years, focused on categories where we can replace Chinese product for long-standing customers, excluding sheets and towels. ■

Satadri Chanda
Director
Megatherm Inudction Ltd.

How has continuous R&D helped Megatherm improve the energy efficiency and productivity of its induction equipment?

Continuous R&D sits at the core of what we do, and it has helped save more than a billion units of electricity nationally since we launched our Green series. In Induction melting, we've reached 455 kWh/t i.e. 60-80 kWh/t lower than older furnaces and 20-30 kWh/t better than newer models. In forging, our equipment now delivers over 3 kg/kWh at 1200-1250°C i.e. up from 2.5 kg/kWh seen in older models. These gains come from established engineering, such as reduced copper lengths and lower resistive losses, plus newer technology like PLC-controlled power delivery, low-loss capacitors, thyristors and IGBTs. The same R&D approach now extends to transformers, helping us enter the fast-growing BESS and solar segments. This has helped us grab market share quickly, scale, and target a bigger push into export markets — a level of sustained R&D investment that isn't a given for an SME.

What has helped Megatherm enter international markets and build a sustainable export business?

What has helped us build an export business is largely the performance and reliability of our equipment in the field. Years of sacrificing profits to commitments has built confidence in overseas clients. Consistent performance across varied grid and climate conditions has been the real differentiator in earning repeat orders from customers abroad. We currently supply to over 50 countries, and our overall business has kept growing even through recent geopolitical disruption affecting some export lanes. Going forward, we are looking to expand more aggressively through joint ventures, partnerships and dealerships in our key global markets.

Which technologies and markets will shape Megatherm's growth over the next five years?

On markets, we see the UK and Europe opening up further under the India-UK FTA, alongside fast-growing Africa and South East Asia, where industrial capacity is still being built out — these developing markets are where much of the next wave of demand will come from. The Middle East should also grow rapidly once current conflicts settle, driven by reconstruction and pent-up industrial demand. Domestically, the fast-growing BESS and solar sectors will be a significant contributor to our growth. On technology, AI will be the defining factor — in product design, operational advisory, quality control, etc. We are working on integrating AI into our furnace and transformer design process, and into the products themselves for smart power regulation, preventive maintenance and automatic diagnostics. ■

Mihir Jayaraman
Chief Executive Officer
Aditya Auto Products & Engineering

ADITYA
FUTURE . DRIVEN

How is Aditya Auto adapting its engineering capabilities to meet the changing needs of the automotive industry?

The automotive industry is moving fast into the era of CASE (Connected, Autonomous, Shared & Electrified). Over and above this, there is a strong focus on vehicle premiumization and safety. Building on our expertise, we have doubled down our focus on mechatronics and motors around this market shift. Aditya Auto runs three product development centers in Bangalore and Stuttgart with 102 engineers, a world class R&D center, and a centralized validation lab that takes a product from concept to sign-off in-house. We deliberately built electronics and embedded software alongside mechanical design, so a full automotive product now arrives with its motor, controller and control algorithm integrated. Sixteen patents, most of them in motors, reflect that change. In addition to further bolster our product design expertise, we have our Engineering Center at Stuttgart, Germany which has over 3 decades of expertise in crafting complex mechatronic assemblies. Beyond this, our Joint Venture with Edscha GmbH which was setup in 2020 is bringing advanced safety critical body systems to the Indian market with multiple launches planned over the next 2-3 years.

What has helped Aditya Auto scale production while maintaining the quality and delivery standards expected by global automotive customers?

Largely by striking a good balance between vertical integration and building robust supply chain systems. On the quality front, we have put in significant efforts to shift the focus from defect detection to defect prevention. This proactive approach through advanced DFQ (Design For Quality) approaches and investments in automation & training have given us significant benefits helping us maintain a world class quality track record for both domestic and export supplies. Aditya Auto has 12 manufacturing plants across Karnataka, Haryana, Maharashtra and Tamil Nadu which are backed by a captive tool room, in-house stamping, fine blanking, cold forging and moulding, and assembly lines, end-of-line testers and special purpose machines that we design and build ourselves. Controlling that chain is what allows quality to hold as volumes rise, because a correction is made where the part is produced rather than two tiers away. Our facilities are certified to IATF 16949, ISO 14001 and ISO 45001, and are audited regularly against stringent customer specific quality systems such as VDA 6.3, ASES and VSA. On delivery, exports to 14 countries are served through JIT warehouses in Europe and the USA and front offices in six countries, which keeps our response local to our customers.

Which technologies and market opportunities will shape Aditya Auto's growth over the next five years?

Three opportunities, running in parallel. The first is the overall push in the automotive industry towards using significantly higher content of motors and actuators in passenger and commercial vehicles. We are currently supplying more than 4 million Brushed DC motors & actuators to customers in India and across the globe. The second is the push towards energy efficiency & electrification. Through our subsidiary; Aditya Avartan where we hold multiple patents in switched and synchronous reluctance technology, a rare-earth + magnet free motor architecture; we are going to market for specific consumer goods and industrial applications. The third opportunity is the global realignment of sourcing. Safety-critical mechatronic assemblies and precision components are being sourced to India. Electronics integration, energy-efficient motors, automation of production lines and product light-weighting sit at the intersection of these opportunities, and that is where our focus & investment is going. ■

Senthil Bala
CEO
Rossell Techsys Limited

ROSSELL TECHSYS

How has Rossell Techsys built the engineering and manufacturing capabilities required to become a trusted supplier to global aerospace and defense companies?

At Rossell Techsys, trust has been built through a combination of deep engineering expertise, disciplined execution and a relentless focus on quality. Over the years, we have invested significantly in advanced manufacturing infrastructure, aerospace-grade processes, digital engineering tools and talent development. Our teams work across complex avionics, electrical systems, wire harnesses, precision manufacturing and integrated aerospace solutions, serving some of the world's most demanding customers.

What differentiates us is our ability to deliver globally benchmarked engineering and manufacturing solutions while maintaining the agility and cost competitiveness of an Indian enterprise. By embedding quality, compliance, and innovation into every stage of the product lifecycle, we have established ourselves as a dependable partner in mission-critical aerospace and defense programs.

What has helped Rossell Techsys win and deliver complex international contracts while meeting strict quality and delivery standards?

Success in global aerospace and defense markets demands much more than technical capability. It requires consistency, predictability, and the confidence that every commitment will be fulfilled without compromise. At Rossell Techsys, our customer-centric approach, robust quality management systems, and culture of operational excellence have been key enablers of this success.

We have built long-term relationships by understanding customer requirements in depth and by delivering solutions that meet exacting international standards. Our multidisciplinary engineering strength, program management discipline, and resilient supply-chain ecosystem enable us to execute highly complex projects with precision. Most importantly, our teams understand that in aerospace and defense, quality and on-time delivery are not performance metrics alone; they are matters of trust and mission readiness.

Which opportunities across aerospace, space, and energy will shape Rossell Techsys' growth over the next five years?

The coming decade represents a transformational opportunity for India and for companies operating in high-technology sectors. We see significant growth potential in aerospace manufacturing, defense modernization, space technologies, unmanned systems, avionics integration, and next-generation energy solutions.

As global supply chains increasingly diversify and India strengthens its position as a strategic manufacturing hub, Rossell Techsys is uniquely positioned to create greater value for global OEMs and domestic programmes alike. Our focus will be on expanding engineering-led manufacturing, enhancing technological capabilities, and participating in emerging domains that demand high reliability and precision. We believe the convergence of aerospace, defense, space, and advanced energy technologies will unlock unprecedented opportunities, and Rossell Techsys is committed to being at the forefront of that transformation, delivering innovation that contributes to national capability while serving global markets. ■

Ketan Mehta
MD & CEO
Rays Power Infra Limited

RAYS POWER INFRA

How has Rays Power Infra expanded from solar EPC into project development, power generation, and long-term asset management?

Our journey has been about progressively moving up the renewable energy value chain. We started with solar EPC and project execution, but over time, we recognized that creating sustainable, long-term value requires capabilities across the entire project lifecycle.

At Rays Power Infra, we therefore expanded into project development through our Co-Development model, where we work across land aggregation, grid connectivity, statutory approvals, evacuation infrastructure and PPAs to create ready-to-build renewable energy projects. This has enabled us to participate much earlier in the project lifecycle and build strong capabilities in project origination and development.

We have also expanded our IPP and power-generation capabilities, allowing us to take greater ownership of assets and their long-term performance. Complementing this, our O&M and asset-management capabilities enable us to remain engaged beyond commissioning, with a focus on reliability, generation efficiency, performance monitoring and maximizing lifecycle value.

Today, we are building an integrated renewable energy platform spanning project development, EPC, power generation and long-term asset management, while increasingly focusing on hybrid renewable projects, energy storage and round-the-clock renewable energy solutions.

For us, the evolution from EPC to an integrated renewable energy platform is not simply about expanding our scope. It is about taking greater ownership of the project lifecycle and creating reliable, bankable and sustainable energy assets for our customers, investors and partners.

What has Rays Power Infra learned about developing commercially viable renewable-energy projects across different markets?

One of our biggest learnings is that a commercially viable renewable energy project is built on much more than a good renewable resource. It requires the right combination of land, grid connectivity, technology, financing, offtake and execution capabilities.

Working across different markets has also taught us that there is no one-size-fits-all approach. Each state and geography has its own regulatory environment, land dynamics, grid infrastructure and commercial considerations. We therefore take a market-specific and holistic approach to project development.

From the early stages, we evaluate the key factors that determine project viability—including resource quality, land, connectivity, evacuation infrastructure, approvals, offtake, project costs and execution risks. This allows us to identify potential challenges early and make better capital-allocation decisions.

Another important learning has been the importance of early-stage development and stakeholder engagement. Strong relationships with government authorities, utilities, landowners, technology partners and financial institutions can significantly improve the development process and ultimately the bankability of a project.

Most importantly, we have learned to look at commercial viability across the entire lifecycle of the asset, rather than just up to commissioning. Design optimisation, construction quality, operational efficiency, O&M and long-term asset performance all have a direct impact on project returns.

These learnings have helped us build a more integrated approach to renewable energy—combining project development, EPC, power generation and asset management to create projects that are not only executable, but commercially sustainable over the long term.

Which opportunities in solar, wind, hybrid power, and energy storage will shape Rays Power Infra's next phase of growth?

Solar will remain a core growth engine, particularly through large-scale projects and our project-development capabilities. At the same time, we see increasing value in combining solar with wind and storage, which can improve generation profiles, asset utilisation and the overall economics of renewable projects.

We believe hybrid and round-the-clock renewable power will become increasingly important as customers seek reliable and predictable clean power rather than only intermittent generation. Our experience in project development and EPC positions us well to participate in these larger and more complex integrated projects.

Energy storage is another important strategic opportunity. As renewable penetration increases, battery energy storage and other emerging storage technologies will play a critical role in balancing supply and demand, improving grid flexibility and enabling renewable energy to be delivered when it is most valuable.

We are therefore increasingly looking at projects that bring together solar, wind, storage, transmission connectivity and advanced energy-management systems into a single integrated solution.

Ultimately, our focus in the next phase is not simply on adding more megawatts. It is about building high-quality, scalable and commercially sustainable renewable-energy assets that deliver greater reliability and value to customers while supporting India's transition toward a cleaner and more resilient power system. ■

Shashank Betharia
Director
Fox solutions Pvt. Ltd.

How has Fox Solutions expanded from industrial automation into connected and data-driven manufacturing solutions?

FOX Solutions Pvt Ltd was incepted in 1995 as an Industrial Automation software and commissioning provider for Siemens Programmable Controllers. After putting in 10 years in technical division of Siemens, my partner Joy Aloor and I decided to start this business. In the initial years we executed many projects on behalf of Siemens. Being first generation entrepreneur with no guidance we followed the belief that business shall show us the way to expand. And it did. All we did was keep our mind alert to new allied opportunities. Starting from 10x10 ft room today FOX Group is an Indian MNC with 22 offices in India, 6 companies overseas (Dubai (2004), Singapore (2009), Oman (2014), Australia (2016), Canada (2018), and Abu Dhabi (2025)). The engineering team strength exceeds 1000. We have 3 factories in Nashik, one in Dubai and one staging factory in Singapore. The business expanded to starting Industrial Automation panel assembly in 1997, to Industrial IT in 1999, to field installation in 2002, to Special Purpose Machines and Airport Baggage Handling low level control sub-contractor in 2005, to Plant Engineering Services in 2012, Airport Baggage Handling Main Contractor in 2020 and finally Airport IT solution provider in 2023. We kept on seizing opportunities even when it knocked not only on our doors but also on somebody else's door and here we are 31 years later.

What has helped Fox Solutions manage complex automation projects from design through commissioning?

We believe in "Obstacles are what you see when your eyes are away from goal". Both, Joy and me, being technical we have been hands on leader from the beginning. We have trained our team to find solutions and deliver first time right and on time. The company has the tenacity of not giving up. Rarely have we ever let go of a project because of technicality. This is the DNA of FOX. We never let a client leave us. We exist because of many "Happy Clients". Every FOXIAN breathes that.

Which technologies and market opportunities will shape Fox Solutions' growth over the next five years?

Airport Baggage Handling, Airport IT, Industrial IT, high level Industrial Automation and Plant Engineering Services. We plan to go for IPO in next couple of years. The company shall live long after the founders are gone and shall be professionally managed icon. ■

Ashish V Khemka
Chairman & MD
AMN Life Science Pvt Ltd.

How is AMN Life Science using AI and data to improve pharmaceutical research, manufacturing, and quality control?

At AMN Life Science, AI and data are enablers of speed, quality and smarter decision-making. In R&D, AI can accelerate literature and patent intelligence, support in defining Quality Target Product Profile (QTPP) and Critical Quality Attribute (CQA), risk assessment, experimental design. In analytical development, it can strengthen Analytical QbD, method development, forced-degradation studies, impurity profiling and method validation aligned with ICH Q14 and Q2(R2).

This results in shorter timelines, fewer repeat experiments and more consistent, accurate submissions, reviewed by qualified scientists under strict data integrity, GxP and information-security controls.

What has helped AMN Life Science scale its formulation and API capabilities across regulated and emerging markets?

Access to Life… Access to Healthy Life is more than a line, it is the promise we scale by one quality standard, for regulated or emerging markets. Global market and client access footprint has enabled AMN to build its strong formulation and API capabilities across diverse geographies.

Our R&D center covers formulation and analytical development, lab-scale trials and technology transfer, with formats including orally disintegrating tablets, sustained-release capsules and taste-masked syrups, designed to remain stable across various climatic zones.

Manufacturing runs across two sites, a general-portfolio facility at Kala-Amb, Chandigarh, and a beta-lactam unit at Bhilad, Vapi, WHO cGMP and EU GMP compliant, with approvals from Health Canada, TGA, UAE, UK MHRA and SAHPRA.

Over 300 registered products anchor our branded generics business across Africa and South-East Asia, while EU dossier supports our Malta and London offices. Our API plant at Chennai which supports in-house manufacturing alongside R&D gives us control over quality from API to finished dosage form.

Which products and international markets will shape AMN Life Science's growth over the next five years?

Our vision is seamless supply of quality medicines worldwide, and our mission is to become an integrated pharmaceutical company delivering them affordably. Four themes will drive growth: "differentiated products, regulated-market expansion, selected emerging markets and stronger partnerships."

We offer a therapeutic portfolio built to treat, not just manage, spanning chronic and acute care. We are bringing sachet manufacturing into our portfolio, starting with "Metformin sachets" for UK compliance, giving patients an easier alternative to tablets and capsules.

In regulated and SRA markets, our EU GMP, Health Canada, TGA and UK MHRA approvals underpin a growing dossier pipeline of in-licensed products. While Africa, South-East Asia and MENA remain key emerging markets. Partnerships, including injectables, cephalosporins, and oncology segment will keep adding products, in service of our promise: Access to Healthy Life! ■

Powering Solar's Next Growth Phase

Gautam Das, Founder & CEO of Oorjan Cleantech, discusses how data-driven monitoring, flexible financing models, and energy storage solutions are helping make solar more efficient, accessible, and scalable for businesses across India.

How is Oorjan using data and IoT to improve the monitoring and maintenance of solar installations?

At Oorjan, we believe a solar asset should not simply be installed - its generation and returns must be continuously monitored and optimised. We use IoT-enabled monitoring to track generation, plant performance in real time. This helps identify deviations and initiate corrective actions before they result any adverse impact on generation.

Our technology is geography and inverter agnostic, allowing us to monitor assets across locations and configurations. The resulting data helps us benchmark performance, strengthen preventive maintenance and improve system design and management.

Our goal is to move from reactive maintenance to predictive, data-led asset management, helping customers maximise generation, minimise downtime and improve the long-term returns.

How can flexible financing make solar energy more accessible to homes and growing businesses?

The barrier to solar adoption is often not the technology, but the upfront investment. At Oorjan, we therefore see financing as an integral part of our offering.

We offer Capex, loans, Power Purchase Agreements (PPA) and Pay-As-You-Go (PAYG) models, tailored to customers' financial requirements. Our partnerships with banks and NBFCs further reduce the upfront burden, particularly for small and medium businesses.

For businesses, flexible financing can transform a large upfront capital expenditure into a predictable energy cost, freeing capital for core operations while delivering sustained savings. We believe the next phase of solar adoption will be shaped by the convergence of technology, innovative financing and predictable savings.

Which customer segments and solar solutions will shape Oorjan's growth over the next five years?

Our growth will focus strongly on Commercial & Industrial (C&I) customers, across both rooftop solar and Open Access renewable energy. Oorjan already has rooftop customers across 22 states and Open Access customers across 8 states, and we are committed to scaling across India.

We see Battery Energy Storage Systems (BESS) as another major growth opportunity. Solar combined with storage can improve power reliability, optimise consumption, reduce expensive (peak-power) dependence and give businesses greater control over energy costs.

Our ambition is to build an integrated clean-energy company spanning rooftop and Open Access renewable energy, BESS, financing, customer adoption and post-sales support. Our GreenCare technology platform is an important part to this journey, enabling smarter monitoring, asset management and customer engagement. We will continue to invest in technology, talent and capabilities to enhance customer experience and deliver solutions that are both commercially attractive and environmentally responsible. ■

V Ravichandran
Co-Founder & Director
Indus Life Sciences Pvt. Ltd.

How does Indus Life Sciences identify healthcare and wellness opportunities that can succeed across international markets?

At Indus Life Sciences, based on our earlier experience in Pharma Selling & Marketing, we began with understanding local healthcare needs rather than simply introducing products. We study disease patterns, prescribing practices, regulatory requirements, affordability, and consumer behavior in each market before evaluating commercial potential.

Our teams work closely with healthcare professionals, distributors, and regulatory authorities across more than 45 countries, enabling us to identify unmet needs and emerging trends. We assess every opportunity through a structured framework that considers medical relevance, market potential, regulatory feasibility, manufacturing capability, and long-term sustainability.

By combining scientific evidence with local market insights, we develop quality pharmaceutical and wellness solutions that are both relevant and accessible. This market-led approach has been fundamental to our international growth.

What has helped Indus Life Sciences build trusted brands while adapting its market strategy to local consumer needs?

Trust has been built through consistency, quality, and long-term partnerships. Rather than adopting a uniform global strategy, we work closely with local partners to understand each country's healthcare ecosystem and adapt our product portfolio, scientific communication, and brand-building initiatives accordingly.

Our emphasis on internationally compliant manufacturing, strong regulatory standards, dependable supply, and responsive customer support has strengthened confidence among healthcare professionals, distributors, and patients alike.

Beyond products, we invest in medical education, disease awareness, and community-focused initiatives that create meaningful value. We believe sustainable brands are built by delivering reliable healthcare solutions while respecting local market realities and cultural diversity.

Which products and markets will shape Indus Life Sciences' growth over the next five years?

Our growth strategy focuses on expanding both our geographic presence and therapeutic portfolio. While Africa, Southeast Asia, Latin America, and the Caribbean will remain key markets, we also aim to strengthen our position within existing countries through broader product offerings.

We see significant opportunities in chronic disease management, cardiometabolic care, gastroenterology, women's health, paediatrics, and evidence-based nutrition. We are also exploring innovative therapies, specialty wellness products, biologics, biosimilars, and advanced drug delivery systems that address evolving healthcare needs.

Guided by our Vision 2035, our objective is to expand to 100 countries with over 2,000 product registrations while remaining committed to quality, affordability, innovation, and trusted partnerships that improve access to healthcare worldwide. ■

Chairman and Managing Director
Mach Travel Solutions Limited

What strategic choices helped Mach Travel Solutions expand from MICE services into a technology-enabled travel solutions company?

Mach Travel Solutions Limited built its MICE business around execution quality, supplier relationships and the ability to manage complex travel programmes. We are extending those strengths across Corporate Travel, MICE, B2B, Leisure, Inbound Travel and Government & Institutional Projects, creating a broader base for growth.

Investment in technology, people and processes supports this transition. Our change of name from Mach Conferences & Events Limited reflects the ambition to build a technology-enabled travel solutions company serving businesses, institutions and individual travellers across India and international markets. The strategic priority is to connect these capabilities through an integrated operating model, while retaining the service discipline that underpins our MICE business.

How is technology helping Mach Travel Solutions manage complex travel requirements and deliver a consistent customer experience at scale?

Our approach to travel technology combines digital convenience with human support. In Corporate Travel, structured booking workflows, approvals and reporting help clients gain visibility and control over their travel requirements. For clients managing frequent or large travel programmes, clearer information can support timely decisions and help service teams respond when plans change. Across our businesses, technology supports supplier coordination, customer communication and the management of complex group movements.

We are also developing Machtravel.com, our B2C online travel platform, currently available for public. Customer feedback will help us refine the experience as the platform develops.

The focus is on making each stage of the journey easier to manage, with consistent processes and access to service teams when travellers need assistance. This combination will be essential as we scale.

Which business segments will shape Mach Travel Solutions' growth over the next five years?

Over the next five years, we expect growth to come from both established capabilities and emerging businesses. Corporate Travel offers opportunities to develop recurring client relationships, while MICE remains a core strength.

B2B, Leisure, Inbound Travel and Government & Institutional Projects broaden our opportunity across distribution, individual travellers and complex institutional programmes. Inbound Travel also provides a dedicated focus on international travellers visiting India.

Our B2C platform offers another way to build direct customer relationships. We intend to scale these businesses sustainably, strengthen our technology backbone and deepen service capabilities, with growth guided by operational readiness and customer needs. Developing domestic and international relationships should help us serve a wider customer base while maintaining attention to execution quality and long-term value. ■

Nachiket Shah
Managing Director
Aniket Metals Pvt Ltd.

How has vertical integration helped Aniket Metals improve product quality, control costs, and reduce delivery times?

Vertical integration gives us control from raw-material processing to the finished product. At Aniket Metals, key operations—including metal forming, impact bonding, polishing, coating, assembly, testing and packaging—are managed within our manufacturing ecosystem. This is especially important for technically demanding products such as tri-ply, hybrid, ceramic-coated ranges and stainless-steel appliances and cookware.

The quality benefit is traceability and accountability. If there is a variation in bonding, flatness, coating, finish or handle alignment, we can identify and correct it at source rather than rely on multiple outside vendors. Integration also reduces external processing margins, inter-vendor transport, conversion losses and excess inventory. Tooling, production and packaging can move in parallel, shortening development cycles and improving delivery reliability. It also enables us to react faster when retailers change specifications or volumes.

What has helped Aniket Metals build long-term relationships with leading international retailers?

Large retailers do not build long-term partnerships on price alone. They value consistent quality, compliance, transparency and dependable execution. We combine manufacturing depth with the discipline required to serve global retail programmes. Every product must perform well while consistently meeting testing, traceability, packaging, labelling and delivery requirements at scale.

Our experience supplying retailers such as Walmart and Costco has taught us to work backwards from the consumer and the retailer's operating standards. We invest in product engineering, testing and corrective-action systems, and customise products for individual markets rather than push a standard catalogue. Most importantly, we communicate issues early, take ownership when something goes wrong and keep improving. Trust is built through repeated execution, not presentations.

What will be critical to establishing Aniket Metals' own brand in global markets?

Manufacturing capability is an advantage, but it is not a brand. We must translate our engineering strength into a clear consumer promise: superior materials, thoughtful Indian engineering, durable performance and strong value. The products must also be distinctive and recognisable, not easily substituted.

Three capabilities will be critical: market-specific consumer insight, disciplined investment in brand and digital distribution, and after-sales service that earns advocacy. We should enter selectively, concentrate on a few hero categories and prove repeat purchase before expanding. Our OEM scale and annual retail sales exceeding US$100 million provide supply-chain strength and credibility, but consumers will judge us on design, storytelling, reviews and service. The winning formula is world-class manufacturing behind a brand that feels relevant, trusted and locally intelligent. ■

Pumping Solutions for Pumped Storage Plants (PSPs)

Pumped Storage Plants (PSPs) comprise complex underground and surface structures where reliable and continuous pumping solutions are essential for effective water management throughout construction, commissioning (including first filling) and plant operation.

PSPs require highly reliable pumping systems for Initial Reservoir Filling as well as continuous Drainage & Dewatering (D&D) of the underground powerhouse, tunnels, caverns and other areas.

AQUA Machineries Pvt. Ltd. (AMPL) offers Engineered Submerged Pumpsets specifically suited for demanding Hydro Power and PSP applications; Delivering high reliability, robust solids handling capability and uninterrupted operation under challenging site conditions.

FIRST FILLING OF RESERVOIR – PUMPING SOLUTION

First filling of a reservoir involves pumping water from an available water source into the lower or upper reservoir during the commissioning phase of a Pumped Storage Plant.

AMPL offers Engineered Submersible Pumpset solutions for first filling applications; With both fixed and floating pumping station configurations available.

- Fixed Pumping Station – Suitable where a permanent intake and civil infrastructure are available.
- Floating Pumping Station – Submersible pumpsets mounted on a pontoon or barrage-mounted arrangement; Providing operation flexibility to operate across varying water levels at the source and reduce extensive and bulky intake/ civil structures.

PERMANENT D&D SYSTEM – PUMPED STORAGE PLANTS

The Permanent Drainage & Dewatering (D&D) System is a critical operational and safety system for an underground PSP, designed to continuously collect and remove seepage, leakage, drainage and accumulated water from the powerhouse cavern, transformer cavern, tunnels, sumps and other associated structures.

AQUA engineering pumpsets are configured to meet the required flow, total head, operating and site specific conditions. Being submerged operation, it eliminates the need for conventional priming arrangements, enabling reliable and quick pump start-up.

AQUA – PROVEN EXPERIENCE IN HYDROPOWER

AQUA submersible pumpsets have been operating in demanding Hydropower and PSP applications since decades, including projects exposed to challenging water and sediment conditions. This experience has enabled AQUA to develop practical expertise in designing pumping solutions for silt-laden water, varying seasonal conditions and demanding underground environments.

ADVANTAGE ON AQUA SIDE

Robust Submersible Technology
Customized Hydraulic Selection
High Reliability
Compact Installation
Duty/Standby Flexibility
Proven Hydro Experience

How is AI changing the way Gleeds plans, monitors, and delivers complex construction projects?

We are able to analyse the project with multiple scenarios, compare with benchmarks other projects. In addition, the pace at which are able to establish the plans has also improved significantly. I would say AI helps us in doing things faster and facilitates deeper analysis of the data available including allows real time project monitoring, It gives a greater confidence to the decision making, however does not replace the expertise and intelligence we bring on board.

What should growing MSMEs prioritize to prevent cost overruns and delays in major expansion projects?

At the outset it is important to have a clear execution strategy for the project and adhere to it. Risk management and risk mitigation must be an important part of the project delivery function. Usually the end user requirements are not captured clearly which results in changes therefore impact on time and cost. In larger organisations, the project controls function is far more robust compared to MSME which gets ignored. This is where we as PMC come into picture and put the systems in place and help in timely delivery within budget.

How can sustainability be built into project decisions without compromising cost, quality, or delivery timelines?

Sustainability should not be treated as an additional requirement and must be an integral part of the project delivery plan. A whole life cost perspective must be seen rather than simple capital expenditure. Many sustainable solutions may have a slightly higher upfront cost but deliver significant savings throughout the asset's life. Therefore following principles can be followed:

- Integrate sustainability into design early stages
- Data driven decision making
- Engagement of supply chain to explore and understand the options
- Ensure that the sustainability targets support the business outcomes rather than becoming a burden ■

Amnex Infotechnologies Pvt. Ltd.

AMNEX

How does Amnex identify real-world problems that can be solved through AI, IoT, and geospatial technologies?

We start with the problem, not the technology. Across agriculture, mobility, highways, smart cities, mining, ports, logistics and utilities, we ask the same questions: what is difficult to see, what is difficult to predict, and where can better intelligence change the outcome? In agriculture, the opportunity is not only to digitise farming but to build agricultural digital public infrastructure that connects land, crops, weather, credit and farmers at national scale. In mobility and traffic, it is safer, more reliable movement of people. On highways and in cities, it is planning and operating vast physical networks with one source of truth. In mining, ports and utilities, it is governance, safety and resource efficiency in harsh, high-stakes environments. AI, IoT and geospatial technologies then become the building blocks. The objective is simple: use technology to make the physical world work better.

What has helped Amnex scale its technology platforms across diverse sectors and large public-sector projects?

Scale comes from reusable platforms plus deep domain execution. One geospatial-AI-IoT stack is adapted across sectors rather than rebuilt each time. Agriculture work on digital public infrastructure taught us how to operate at ecosystem scale. Mobility, adaptive traffic and projects such as SAMRIDHI showed how technology, data and operations must work together across large physical networks and many stakeholders. Mining governance, port geospatial programmes and utility systems added lessons in compliance, safety and interoperability. What travels is not a slide deck; it is robust platforms, field-proven integration of AI, data and IoT, the ability to deliver with governments, agencies and operators across geographies. Technology has to work in the real world, not only in a lab.

Which technologies and industry opportunities will shape Amnex's growth over the next five years?

Growth will be shaped by the convergence of AI, geospatial intelligence, IoT and data with the physical world. AI will move from explaining what happened to predicting what will happen and enabling systems to act with greater autonomy. We see significant opportunity in digital public infrastructure, intelligent mobility and traffic, highways, smart urban systems, agriculture, mining, ports, logistics and utilities in India and internationally, including through our presence in Middle East and work beyond our home market. Our ambition is to build Amnex as a digital infrastructure platform company for essential public and industrial systems, making them smarter to plan, easier to run, safer to trust, increasingly autonomous and sovereign by design. ■

Accurate Industrial Controls Pvt Ltd.

ACCURATE®
INDUSTRIAL CONTROLS PVT. LTD.

How is Accurate Industrial Controls supporting Atmanirbhar Bharat by developing indigenous technologies for critical defense and industrial applications?

We champion Atmanirbhar Bharat by leveraging deep engineering, proprietary IP, and domestic manufacturing to develop and sustain critical technologies in-house. Backed by a dedicated R&D team - PhD Holders, MTech from IITs and reputed institutions, allocates 1/3rd of our salary bills towards R&D consistently for last decade, 18 import substitutes, Indian and US patents, spread across 9 facilities, powered by 1,200+ champions.

Our Auxiliary Power Unit for T-72 and T-90 tanks, developed under the Ministry of Defence's Make-II framework, reflects a part of this journey. Engineered and validated in India, including an in-house developed alternator, the programme has progressed through rigorous trials to full-scale induction among many others.

Our other successful Defence Projects for MoD include Mechanical Minefield Marking Equipment, Mine Trawls and Ploughs, Akashteer Power Systems (deployed during Op Sindoor), Light Armoured Multi Purpose Vehicles.

Under iDEX for the Indian Navy, we developed our indigenous ISACA marine autonomy platform powered by our proprietary Drishtipatha™ situational-awareness and collision-avoidance stack, achieving Indian Register of Shipping certification and clearing the Indian Navy's Single Stage Composite Trials.

Telematics, Intelligent Transport System - 1.2 Mn IoT Telematics Systems to Tata Motors as single source

Industrial Refrigerators - JV with a UK based firm for last 16+ years, in-house manufacturing of refrigerators drawers.

Consistently exporting to US, UK, Australia, EU, ASEAN

How is Accurate Industrial Controls using AI-based predictive monitoring to improve the reliability of critical defense assets?

Our MIL-grade DG sets provide critical power for defence systems including field radars, launchers and other mission-critical equipment.

Our NeuroGen™ Digital Twin continuously monitors DG-set operating parameters to detect anomalies and degradation trends. AI-based models provide early warnings and estimate Remaining Useful Life (RUL) of critical subsystems. NeuroGen also enables rapid simulations to assess how changing operating conditions could affect equipment health and RUL.

What has helped Accurate Industrial Controls build a sustainable presence in international markets?

Regular exporters since last 16 years, 30% of revenues from direct exports to the US, UK, Europe, Australia, Gulf, ASEAN, etc. - positioning ourselves as a full-lifecycle manufacturing partner:

- Adhering to quality benchmarks, holding AS9001:2016 (Aerospace), NADCAP, UL, CE marking, RoHS, IATF, ISO 9001:2015, ISO 27001:2022, and CMMI Level 3 qualifications.
- Direct supplier of fluid distribution systems to global leaders including Boeing, Eaton, and Parker.
- Our 16+ years UK joint venture manufactures patented refrigeration systems in Pune with ~85% indigenization while safeguarding partner IP.
- Operating subsidiaries in the US and Europe, alongisde our lean manufacturing hubs in Pune deliver continuous execution, quality discipline, and lasting trust.

CloudFirst Technology Pvt. Ltd.

How is CloudFirst helping growing businesses migrate to the cloud while maintaining security and operational continuity?

CloudFirst Technology: Helping Growing Businesses Move to the Cloud Securely and Seamlessly

For growing businesses, the cloud promises flexibility and lower costs, but concerns about security, downtime and complexity often cause hesitation. Mumbai-based CloudFirst Technology, incorporated in 2019, makes that move easier, offering Google Cloud, AWS, private and public cloud services across India and in the US, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Its phased approach covers assessment, planning, implementation and ongoing optimisation, avoiding rushed transitions. ISO 27001:2013 and ISO 9001:2015 certifications ensure security is built in from the start, while proactive infrastructure management prevents problems before they affect operations.

In late 2024, it launched the CloudFirst AI Factory innovation lab, and earned the 'Cloud Solutions Provider of the Year' title at the Go Global Awards 2025, London. CloudFirst offers a dependable path to the cloud without compromising safety or stability.

How is CloudFirst using AI to help businesses control cloud costs and use resources more efficiently?

CloudFirst Technology: Using AI to Make Cloud Spending Smarter

Cloud flexibility brings a new challenge: controlling costs. Flexera's 2024 State of the Cloud Report found 80% of enterprises exceed their cloud budgets due to inefficiencies, over-provisioning and weak governance. CloudFirst Technology tackles this with Reinforce360, an AI-powered FinOps platform developed with Grag AI Factory.

Combining cost optimisation, automation and compliance governance, it offers real-time visibility, automated policy enforcement and predictive analytics aligned with the AWS Well-Architected Framework. CloudFirst says it can cut costs by up to 15 to 20% by eliminating idle or underutilised resources and enforcing tagging that shows which teams drive spend.

An AI chatbot lets managers query spending in natural language instead of digging through dashboards. Recognised at the Go Global Awards 2025 London, Reinforce360 keeps cloud environments efficient, compliant and affordable. Learn more at reinforce360.com.

Which services and markets will shape CloudFirst Technology's growth over the next five years?

From CloudFirst to CloudSmart: The Services and Markets Shaping CloudFirst Technology's Next Five Years

Moving to the cloud is now a given. The next phase is making it intelligent, connecting cloud platforms with AI agents, robotics and automation to run business operations. For CloudFirst Technology, guided by its "Cloud First, AI Always" philosophy, this means evolving from "CloudFirst" to "CloudSmart."

Through its Grag AI Factory, the company can build AI agents that act, not just analyse, resizing servers, fixing misconfigurations and responding to security alerts. Reinforce360 could grow from a FinOps tool into an autonomous operations hub, while cloud-connected robotics can help factories and warehouses predict failures and optimise workflows.

Having expanded into Dubai, the UK, Singapore and the US, and targeting sovereign cloud for regulated sectors, CloudFirst aims to help businesses think, act and improve on their own. ■

Vinsak Group

How does VINSAK develop customized printing and packaging solutions for changing customer requirements?

Customization at VINSAK starts with listening. Our teams work closely with converters to understand their product mix, run lengths, substrates and compliance needs before recommending a configuration. Because we work across narrow-web, flexo, offset, digital and hybrid technologies, we are not tied to one answer. We match the technology to the application. Our 2023 acquisition of Rotatek augmented our manufacturing capabilities within the group, giving us in-house engineering capability to tailor press configurations, integrate inline finishing and adapt solutions as needs evolve. Equally important is what follows installation: training, application support and service that help customers stay competitive as markets, regulations and consumer expectations change.

Ranesh Bajaj

What has helped VINSAK build a sustainable business presence across the Middle East and Africa?

Since 1996, we have served customers in more than 130 countries. Our presence across the Middle East and Africa has been built on long-term customer relationships, local market understanding and reliable technical support. These are diverse markets, and customers need more than equipment; they need the right technology, application expertise, spare parts and responsive service. We have therefore focused on developing strong regional relationships and strengthening our technical and commercial support network. Our expanding portfolio of technologies within the VINSAK Group also allows us to address a wider range of applications and customer requirements. We believe sustainable growth comes from being a long-term technology partner, understanding local market needs and continuing to support customers throughout the life of their equipment.

Gita Bajaj

Which technologies will shape the future of secure and sustainable packaging over the next five years?

Four areas stand out. First, Hyrbid printing machines, which enable short runs, personalization and reduced waste. Second, smart and secure packaging: serialization, track-and-trace, QR codes and anti-counterfeit features that protect brands and consumers. Third, sustainable materials and processes, including mono-material structures, recyclable substrates, low-migration and water-based inks, and energy-efficient drying. Regulations such as EPR and deposit return schemes will accelerate this shift. Fourth, automation and AI-driven workflows, from predictive maintenance to inline quality inspection, which improve consistency and cut waste. The leaders will combine all four to deliver packaging that is protected, traceable and recyclable.

Utham Korekkana
Director - Sales
Signature Dwellings Private Limited

How does Signature Dwellings balance affordability, design quality, and lifestyle amenities when developing residential projects?

At Signature Dwellings, affordability is not achieved by compromising on quality. Instead, it is driven by thoughtful planning, design efficiency, and disciplined execution. From project conception, we focus on maximizing space utilization, optimizing construction processes, and collaborating with experienced architects and consultants to ensure that every square foot delivers value to homeowners. This approach allows us to offer well-designed homes at accessible price points while maintaining high standards of construction and aesthetics.

We also believe that modern homebuyers seek more than just a residence. They want a holistic living experience. Consequently, our developments incorporate curated amenities, landscaped open spaces, natural ventilation, privacy-focused layouts, and community-oriented features that enhance everyday life. By adopting what we call an experience-led approach to development, we create homes that remain relevant to evolving lifestyles while staying within reach of aspirational buyers.

What has helped Signature Dwellings maintain construction quality and delivery discipline as its project portfolio expands?

Our ability to maintain quality and delivery discipline stems from a culture of meticulous planning and accountability. Since our inception, we have prioritized process-driven execution, regulatory compliance, and transparent project management. Every project follows clearly defined quality benchmarks, supported by regular monitoring and collaboration with trusted contractors, consultants, and suppliers.

Another important factor is our focused growth strategy. Rather than expanding indiscriminately across multiple markets, we have built deep knowledge of our core operating locations, enabling stronger execution control and faster decision-making. Our leadership philosophy empowers teams to take ownership of outcomes, ensuring agility without compromising standards. As a result, we have been able to scale our portfolio while retaining the consistency, reliability, and customer trust that are critical in the real estate sector.

Which customer segments and cities will shape Signature Dwellings' growth over the next five years?

Over the next five years, we see significant opportunities among aspiring urban professionals, first-time homebuyers, upgrade seekers, and families looking for greater lifestyle value without moving into ultra-premium price brackets. These customers increasingly prioritize connectivity, community living, sustainability, and thoughtfully designed spaces that can adapt to changing needs.

Geographically, Bengaluru and Kochi will remain key growth markets for us. Both cities continue to benefit from strong economic activity, infrastructure development, and sustained housing demand. We also see growing potential in emerging residential corridors within these regions, where improved connectivity and urban expansion are creating new opportunities for thoughtfully planned communities. Our focus will remain on anticipating shifting buyer expectations and delivering future-ready homes that combine quality, value, and a differentiated living experience. ■

Prasad Khadilkar
Managing Director
Maestrotek Innovations Pvt. Ltd.

How does Maestrotek connect existing factory machines with modern IoT, cloud, and enterprise systems?

At Maestrotek, we believe the future of manufacturing lies in connecting—not replacing— existing industrial assets. Our solutions integrate legacy and modern machines through industrial communication protocols, edge gateways and IoT architectures, enabling seamless data flow into cloud platforms, SCADA, MES and ERP systems. The objective is to create a unified digital thread between the shop floor and business operations, allowing manufacturers to improve visibility, traceability and decision-making while maximizing the value of their existing infrastructure.

How is Maestrotek using AI and predictive analytics to turn machine data into better operational decisions?

Machine data becomes valuable only when it drives timely action. We use AI-enabled analytics to identify performance trends, detect abnormal operating conditions and support predictive maintenance before failures occur. Rather than treating AI as a standalone technology, we apply it to solve practical manufacturing challenges such as reducing downtime, improving Overall Equipment Effectiveness (OEE), optimizing energy consumption and enhancing product quality. This helps customers transition from reactive maintenance to data-driven operational excellence.

What has helped Maestrotek adapt its automation and digitalization solutions across industries with different operational and compliance needs?

Our adaptability comes from combining deep domain expertise with an open, vendorindependent technology approach. Every industry has unique operational, regulatory and integration requirements, so we design modular solutions that evolve with customer needs. This capability is further strengthened by our wider industrial technology ecosystem: COPA-DATA India Pvt. Ltd. delivers industrial automation and digitalization software through the zenon platform; Beijer Electronics Technologies Pvt. Ltd. specializes in HMI, industrial communication and automation connectivity; and Meveic Technologies LLP develops industrial computing, IIoT and edge hardware solutions. Together, these complementary capabilities enable scalable, future-ready digital transformation across manufacturing industries. ■

TALIN

Talin: India's Leading Modular Office Manufacturer

320,000+ sq.ft
manufacturing scale

19,000+ units
produced every month

300+ clients
across sectors

29+ years
of experience

Built on a Journey of Trust

Today, three decades since its founding in 1997, Talin stands as a full-stack office furniture manufacturer. Our technology runs on precision-engineered, increasingly automated production lines and tech-enabled furniture systems built for the modern workplace. Our client roster includes marquee names across banking, technology, manufacturing and consulting - Bosch, IBM, ABB, AMD, Amazon, Google, Apple and PwC - reflecting the scale of India's enterprise and GCC landscape. Our facility footprint covers a growing manufacturing base, producing at scale under certified quality systems. And our product portfolio spans workstations, seating, storage and acoustic pod solutions - a foundation built on craft, and scaled through discipline.

"We are setting up a new global standard in sustainability, while manufacturing from India for the world."

Anand Joseph
Founder & CEO, Talin

What's Next for Talin?

Talin's next chapter is built on a clear set of commitments. On sustainability, the company is deepening its environmental credentials - ISO, FSC and Green Pro certifications, and SBTi emissions targets - in line with its broader sustainability reporting. We are working to indigenize office furniture manufacturing, reducing reliance on imported components and materials. We aim to grow our client portfolio well beyond today's 300+ organizations. Production capacity is scaling rapidly with five active units and the sixth, fully automated, opening next year. And for the first time, Talin is opening itself to export markets, taking Indian-made workplace furniture global.

Improving Hydraulic Tube Assembly Efficiency with STAUFF Form EVO

A technology comparison based on ISO 8434-1-compatible hydraulic tube connection architecture

THE CHALLENGE

Hydraulic tube assemblies must provide reliable sealing, mechanical retention and controlled assembly while remaining efficient to manufacture. Conventional welding, cutting-ring and flaring technologies have established applications, but compact routing and repeatable production can create a need for an engineered tube-forming approach.

THE STAUFF FORM EVO APPROACH

STAUFF Form EVO is the further development of the STAUFF Form Tube Forming System introduced in 2015. The system uses four essential components: an ISO 8434-1 fitting body, ISO 8434-1 union nut, STAUFF Form EVO sealing ring and formed tube end. Its positive-locking design combines an elastomer sealing element with an optimized formed tube end intended to preserve flow behaviour.

EFFICIENCY	COMPACT DESIGN	SERVICEABILITY
Low cycle times, short tool changes and intuitive touchscreen operation.	Low insertion depth supports complex geometries and smaller bending radii.	Low assembly torque, short assembly path and repeated reassembly capability.

ENGINEERING IMPACT

The Form EVO concept turns tube-end preparation into a controlled forming process. Dedicated equipment and exchangeable internal tube supports support repeatable production. The supplied brochure states suitability for steel and stainless-steel tubing, metric dimensions from 6–42 mm in the Light Series and 6–38 mm in the Heavy Series, with Heavy Series nominal pressures up to 800 bar. Final qualification remains application-specific.

WHY TUBE FORMING MATTERS

Controlled forming can support consistent connection geometry, reliable sealing, compact tube routing and efficient assembly. The Form EVO sealing ring provides the primary sealing function, while the formed tube geometry provides positive locking and is designed to preserve favourable flow behaviour. This makes tube forming relevant where production repeatability, installation efficiency and serviceability are priorities.

KEY TAKEAWAY STAUFF Form EVO combines ISO 8434-1 fitting components with controlled tube forming, dedicated sealing and efficient final assembly—providing a production-oriented solution for modern hydraulic tube assemblies. Machine features IoT Cloud connection which allows preventive maintenance via remote access and facilitates the documentation of assembly processes.

ABOUT STAUFF INDIA PVT. LTD.

Stauff India Pvt Ltd was established in 2000 and is a member of the Stauff Group which is present in 18 countries. Since its establishment Stauff India has significantly grown in both size and scope of products and services and is a leading supplier for hydraulic accessories.

Stauff India is headquartered in Pune, Maharashtra and has a second office in Ahmedabad, Gujarat along with a national networkof STAUFF Line System Partners. Stauff India has expanded its manufacturing capabilities with the establishment of a new production facility at Aequs SEZ,Belagavi, Karnataka. The state-of-the-art facility strengthens Stauff India's production capacity and is strategically positioned to cater to the growing global and domestic demand for high-quality hydraulic products. The new manufacturing plant was officially inaugurated on 9 September 2026 in the esteemed presence of Stauff Management team, Mr. Bipin Chirmure, Mr. Jörg Deutz, Mr. Boris Milkiyan, and Mr. Carsten Krenz.

Scaling What People Can Do, with AI

How Accolade Electronics rebuilt AIS-140 certification with AI, lifting output 61% with the same 23-person team.

AT A GLANCE | Company: Accolade Electronics Pvt. Ltd., Pune | Function: Customer Success | Period: January to April 2026

The Challenge

Before a commercial vehicle leaves the factory in India, its telematics supplier must complete AIS-140 certification. For Accolade, an automotive electronics Tier-1 with over 1.2 million connected devices, this meant certifying around 6,000 vehicles a month across three stages (Verify, Process and Issue).

Each certificate took roughly 150 minutes of human effort. Verification meant repeated customer calls to confirm vehicle and SIM details. Processing meant manual data entry into state portals, where a single typo triggered rejection and rework. Issuance meant chasing dealers, customers and internal teams for updates. Then demand doubled year on year, and hiring to match was neither fast nor sustainable.

The Insight

An analysis of the team's day showed 88% of its time went on mechanical work. Only 12% required judgment. The answer: redesign the work itself.

The Transformation

For Accolade's Managing Director, the question was never how many people were needed to handle growth, but how technology could help the same people achieve more. That thinking shaped the transformation: the 23-member team stayed at the centre, and each stage was rebuilt around an AI capability.

Verify: A multilingual voice AI calls customers in their own language, confirms vehicle details, checks SIM activation and asks follow-up questions. 45 minutes became 4.

Process: Software bots log into every state portal, submit clean applications and automatically retry on failure. 75 minutes became 9.

Issue: AI notifies every stakeholder, updates internal systems and closes the ticket. 30 minutes became 2.

Exceptions the AI flags go to human judgment. AI was the cornerstone, supported by multi-skilling, revised hours, cloud infrastructure and training.

The Impact

Between January and April 2026, monthly certificate output rose 61%, from 5,028 to 8,106, while man-hours fell from 4,232 to 3,910. Productivity rose from 1.19 to 2.07 certificates per man-hour. Human effort per certificate fell from 150 minutes to 15. Over 100,000 VAHAN operations were completed in four months, and AI closed over 3,500 tickets end-to-end.

The team's time on judgment-led work rose from 12% to 75%. The goal was never to replace the team, only to change what it does.

What's Next

AIS-140 was the start. Five more Customer Success workflows are on the automation roadmap, and one project is becoming an operating philosophy: AI handles the mechanical, and people handle what matters.

LEADERSHIP

Deepak Jagadale
Co-Founder & Managing Director

"Growth comes from building stronger capabilities, not simply adding capacity."

Methodology

Listing Methodology

The listing of 'Leading SMEs of India 2026' and 'Leading Mid-Corporates of India 2026' is a Dun & Bradstreet initiative that recognizes and celebrates India's leading Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs) and Mid-corporate enterprises. This edition of the report provides a listing of 13,600+ SMEs and 1,700+ Mid-Corporates across multiple industry segments to acknowledge and highlight their achievements and contributions to the Indian economy. In addition to the listings, Dun & Bradstreet also recognized leading SMEs and Mid-Corporates across industry sectors through the Business Excellence Awards 2026.

Listing Eligibility Criteria

SMEs are defined as companies with FY25 standalone annual turnover between INR 10 Crore and INR 500 Crore. Mid-Corporates are defined as companies with FY25 standalone annual turnover between INR 501 Crore and INR 1,500 Crore.Companies primarily engaged in trading activities are not eligible.

Shortlisting Process

- Dun & Bradstreet reached out to SMEs and Mid-Corporates across the country through multiple channels, including email campaigns, digital platforms, industry associations, industry bodies, and Dun & Bradstreet's proprietary database.
- Dun & Bradstreet also utilized financial information available through secondary sources such as the Ministry of Corporate Affairs (MCA), stock exchange filings, company websites, and other credible public domain sources.
- Through this process, Dun & Bradstreet collected and analyzed financial information for FY25, FY24, and FY23 from annual reports, audited financial statements, and other publicly available disclosures. Companies were also invited to submit qualitative information through presentations, certifications, client testimonials, and supporting documents to demonstrate their business excellence and organizational capabilities.
- Dun & Bradstreet employed a proprietary evaluation framework combining quantitative and qualitative parameters to analyze available information and identify leading SMEs and Mid-Corporates across India, as well as to assess companies for industry and thematic Business Excellence Award categories.

Selection of Business Excellence Award Winners

The shortlisted companies were evaluated by the senior leadership team at Dun & Bradstreet India based on a comprehensive assessment of quantitative performance indicators and qualitative evaluation criteria. The final award winners were selected following a detailed review of the available information and consensus among the senior leadership team.

This report and recognition program pay tribute to India's SME and Mid-Corporate sector, acknowledging its resilience, innovation, and contribution to economic growth. We hope this recognition encourages emerging enterprises to continue striving for excellence and inspires broader participation in future editions. We welcome your feedback and suggestions, which will help us further strengthen future editions of the initiative.
